High Court orders lawyers to halt price fixing on fees

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court Monday struck down the lawyer's cherished shield against price competition, opening the way for customers to shop for lower-priced legal services.

In an opinion by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, the court ruled 8 to 0 that the legal profession is subject to the Sherman Antitrust Act, and that minimum fee schedules set by state and local bar associations are a "classic illustration of price fixing."

In another significant ruling, the justices held unconstitutional a Virginia law against advertising legal abortion services in newspapers. The Court ruled 7 to 2 that such laws violate a publisher's First Amendment rights to publish and those of his readers to learn what kinds of abortion services are available.

Regarding the legal fees case, the American Bar Association said at last count, 19 states had rules prohibiting a lawyer from charging below a set amount for his services.

The Justice Department said 34 states and 750 local bar associations had imposed minimum fee requirements at one time or another.

The legal profession is divided over the legitimacy of fee schedules, with young lawyers, attempting to establish their own firms, favoring price competition to help them attract clients.

James D. Fellers, president of the American Bar Association, said in a statement that in its ruling "the Supreme Court basically restated what the American Bar Association and lawyers everywhere have always known. In general, the Court has said that the legal profession has an overriding responsibility to serve the public."

"The opinion was not unexpected and in my view certainly will not make it more difficult for the legal profession to carry out its duties."

The case was brought to the high court by Lewis and Ruth S. Goldfarb, who purchased a home in a Virginia suburb of Washington. They contacted 20 lawyers, all of whom quoted the same price for a title search, citing the Fairfax County minimum fee schedule.

The Goldfarbs sued on behalf of themselves and 2,400 other families who purchased homes in Reston, Va., during the four years prior to the suit. The case now returns to U.S. District Court for an assessment of damages.

Fairfax County dropped the minimum fee system after the suit was filed.

Burger said the bar association established "a fixed, rigid price floor" through a "naked agreement."

He said since home financing often involves out-of-state banks and the federal government, interstate commerce was involved in the price fixing.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., a Virginian and former president of that state's bar association, did not participate in the decision.

Monroe bar years ahead on fee ruling

STROUDSBURG — The Monroe County Bar Association was years ahead of the U.S. Supreme Court in deciding to abolish a minimum scale of lawyer's fees.

The Supreme Court abolished minimum fee schedules in a decision Monday but the local bar association repealed its list several years ago.

Association President Kenneth Lewis said Monday a minimum fee schedule had been repealed a few years ago after being followed for several years.

He didn't know how long the list was used, but added he had a copy dated 1924.

Lawyers are divided as to whether an established fee scale is good. Attorney Ronald Vican said the rates were outdated when the scale was abolished.

"Of course, there are two ways to look at it, but without it, I think you'll find the rates will go higher. It just outgrew itself," Vican said.

David Katz, newest member of the county bar association, said he has always been opposed to fee schedules because he said they promote higher fees.

"An attorney can't be in a position to take advantage of his clients," he said.

He added that a problem for new attorneys is determining how much to charge for their services.

New attorneys have nothing to compare their rates to unless they have worked for another firm before establishing their own practices, Katz added.

House rejects resignation offered by chief CIA prober

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House, in a vote unprecedented in modern times, Monday rejected the resignation of Rep. Lucien Nedzi as chairman of the dissension-torn special committee investigating the CIA.

The 280-64 vote came after Rep. B.F. Sisk, D-Calif., introduced a resolution to abolish the select committee, whose investigation of the Central Intelligence Agency and other intelligence-gathering organizations has been stymied by internal squabbling.

The fate of the committee now lies with the Rules Committee, which could abolish it and create a new committee or transfer its authority to an existing committee.

By refusing to accept Nedzi's offer to quit, the House in effect told Nedzi, D-Mich., it had confidence in him and rejected the argument of five of the panel's seven Democratic members that Nedzi had compromised himself and the committee and could not conduct an impartial inquiry.

The move to oust Nedzi started after he admitted he had been privately briefed more than a year ago by the CIA on the agency's involvement in the overthrow of foreign governments and plots to assassinate some heads of state.

Nedzi told the packed House chamber that "to remain as chairman under the present conditions would be to be an accomplice to a charade. I know I bent over backwards to be fair to my colleagues and to pursue the investigation in a vigorous and responsible manner."

Nedzi, serving his eighth term in the House, drew a heavy round of applause when he said, "My service in the Congress for 14 years has, I believe, been honorable."

A letter of resignation from a committee usually is routinely received and not voted on. The act of voting itself was an oddity, but the fact that the resignation was rejected was, according to one staff member with 50 years of service in the House, unprecedented in his time.

The vote also said the House was ready to either revamp the select committee to get rid of the dissidents or to abolish it and start over. The controversy has blocked the panel's investigation into all U.S. intelligence agencies since its creation on Feb. 19, 1975.

The vote came after Rep. B. F. Sisk, D-Calif., introduced a resolution to abolish the select panel.

The issue is now back before the House Rules Committee.

Riders tangle House action

Busing debate stalls budget vote

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The Pennsylvania House Monday completed four days of stormy debate on 80 amendments to the proposed $4.7 billion state budget — rejecting at the last minute measures opponents called the "Archie Bunker amendments."

Using a parliamentary maneuver, House members defeated amendments to cut off state aid to school districts that bus students and make 20,000 welfare recipients work for the Transportation Department.

There were no votes on the merits of the controversial measures, which were introduced by Rep. Patrick McGinnis, R-Montgomery.

But members voted 101-92 to table the amendment which would make able-bodied persons on welfare work for PennDOT at $3 an hour.

By a 101-88 vote, members ruled unconstitutional the McGinnis amendment that tied anti-busing to the $1 billion in state aid to local school districts.

"The people of Pennsylvania are tired of having their children herded like cattle and bused to where some pointy-headed liberal wants to bus them," said McGinnis, who represents part of Norristown.

Opponents said the amendment to make welfare recipients work for PennDOT was illegal and could mean a loss of $300 million in federal aid.

"We've heard impassioned pleas from these people," McGinnis said. "They were here a few weeks ago chanting 'We want jobs.' ... I don't think it would hurt them to stand out on the highway with a flag...."

House leaders said they hoped for a final vote on the budget today, but there were several amendments — already defeated once — that members wanted considered again by the full chamber before the last rollcall.

Only two major changes were made in the 54-page budget bill during the debate Monday.

By a 101-88 vote, members ruled unconstitutional the McGinnis amendment that tied anti-busing to the $1 billion in state aid to local school districts.

Makes '76 ticket choice clear

Ford wants Rocky back

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford made clear Monday that Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller is his choice for a running mate next year, but noted that the national convention will have the final say on the Republican presidential ticket.

In a statement read to reporters by Press Secretary Ron Nessen, Ford said: "I am convinced that both of us can convince the delegates that individually and as a team we should be nominated."

The Ford comment put his personal stamp of disapproval on suggestions from conservatives in Congress that the choice of a vice presidential candidate be left open by Ford as he seeks the presidential nomination for himself.

Nessen said the statement was prepared even before Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., took an oblique public swipe at Rockefeller during the weekend with a statement that he had always believed the vice president "would make a great secretary of state."

Stevenson threw the choice of vice presidential nominee open to the Democratic convention and Estes Kefauver beat out John F. Kennedy in the balloting.

Size of increase at stake

OPEC to barter oil prices

LIBREVILLE, Gabon (UPI) — High sources in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries said Monday members of the oil cartel are willing to bargain with the industrialized consumer nations over the size of their planned oil price increases set for Oct. 1.

Officials of the powerful 13-nation OPEC said the bargaining would be successful only if the West managed to whittle down the world inflation rate and made concessions over the issue of a dialogue between developing and industrialized nations.

OPEC officials made it clear

Western capitals will come shortly under strong pressure to make concessions—or face economically explosive new oil price hikes.

The officials were commenting on the oil cartel's next strategy moves after the ministerial-level session last week in this African capital.

At that meeting the OPEC, which plunged the industrialized world into its worst recession since the 1930s by increasing oil prices 400 per cent in 1973, decided to consider new oil price hikes this fall. In addition, they decided that the basic means of payments for oil should no longer be the U.S. dollar, but the Special Drawing Rights, a mix of 16 key currencies.

The OPEC session decided that the price increases will be examined at its next oil ministers meeting in Vienna. OPEC's regular headquarters, Sept. 24.

This, they said, will give the industrialized nations more than three months to meet the OPEC advances.

OPEC members — especially hardliners such as Iran, Kuwait and Algeria — claim that oil prices must be raised to catch up with inflation they say is running at 35 per cent a year.

Man admits starting fire which killed 24 people

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (UPI) — A sobbing Peter Leonard pleaded guilty Monday to setting the fire that killed 24 people last year in Gulliver's discotheque in Port Chester, N.Y.

The 23-year old defendant stood with his head bowed, crying quietly as Supreme Court Justice George Beisheim, Jr., told him: "This court is convinced...that you are not a vicious, willful killer."

Pending a probation report, Beisheim said he intended to sentence Leonard to the minimum allowable punishment for felony murder, 15 years to life imprisonment. Had he been found guilty after a jury trial, Leonard faced a possible 25 years to life in prison.

Beisheim, who scheduled sentencing for July 16, also told Leonard, "You certainly did not anticipate the results of your actions... Your moral guilt is not as great as a murderer who killed and intended to kill."

Hundreds of young people were jammed into the discotheque on June 30, 1974 when thick clouds of black smoke suddenly poured into the restaurant through the air conditioning system. In the ensuing tumult, 24 people died of smoke inhalation.

Following the 45-minute proceeding in White Plains Supreme Court, Leonard collapsed in the courtroom and was rushed to White Plains Hospital where he was treated and released.

Pa. Senate votes to abolish GSA

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The Senate Monday passed legislation abolishing the General State Authority and creating a new Department of General Services to handle state construction projects.

The Shapp administration bill passed by a 44-4 vote and was sent to the House.

The bill would put under one department all of the responsibilities currently held by the General State Authority and the Department of Property and Supplies.

It is also an attempt by Gov. Milton J. Shapp to defuse a potentially explosive political issue involving the GSA's power to hire architects, engineers and contractors to design and construct state buildings.

The authority — made up of six legislators, the governor, the auditor general and three gubernatorial appointees — was created in 1935 to by-pass a constitutional provision banning the state from borrowing more than $1 million.

And although the restriction on state borrowing was removed from the Constitution in 1968, the legislature had failed to act on bills to create a new department. The Department of Property and Supplies' responsibilities include supervising minor construction and maintenance projects for state buildings, purchasing supplies, operating the state motor pool and handling real estate transactions.

Political corruption rife in Pennsylvania

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a 10-part series on politics in Pennsylvania.)

By JOHN L. MOORE
Harrisburg Bureau

HARRISBURG — Political corruption is rife in Pennsylvania.

Since Watergate, the commonwealth's 300-year-old political structure has virtually come under seige, largely because of the system that politicians of both major parties have developed to raise money to finance political activity.

It is a system that its critics assail as "rotten," and describe as a "cancer."

Politicians and government officials are generally secretive about this system. But it operates on the premise that state jobs, contracts and leases are awarded to persons willing to make financial contributions to the political party controlling the government agency responsible for dispensing the contracts or jobs.

Currently, federal, state and county law enforcement agencies are conducting a score or more of official investigations across Pennsylvania that are understood to be focusing on alleged illegal techniques employed in political fund-raising.

It is premature to say what the outcome of these probes will be, but, based on the accomplishments of some of them to date, the investigative agencies may well be on their way toward documenting that political kickbacks have become as basic to Pennsylvania politics as election campaigns.

There is ample documentation illustrating that at many levels of state government politicians traditionally exert heavy influence on decisions by government officials about filling state jobs or doing out leases and contracts, even though these politicians frequently lack any formal connections with state government.

The documentation also suggests that politicians, with the power to influence these decisions often use it to favor contributors to their campaign war chests.

To be certain, not all politicians and not all political groups rely on this system to raise political capital.

But many do.

"There seems to be a pattern of the use of political and governmental power to encourage, if not extort, political contributions in Pennsylvania," said U.S. Attorney Richard Thornburgh of Pittsburgh.

Gov. Milton J. Shapp has charged publicly that during the administration of his Republican predecessor, Raymond P. Shafer, "there existed a widespread system of forced political contributions both from state employees and from those doing business with the state."

Shapp, whose own Democratic administration has been sharply criticized for continuing the system, has said he detests it and has been actively striving to reform it.

"I inherited this rotten system, and I am not so naive to believe that it suddenly ended when I took office," the governor said in a speech late last year.

He conceded, however, that "a system which has such obvious, long term and deep roots in Pennsylvania politics will not be eradicated easily."

If not uprooted since Shapp's speech, the system has certainly become much more visible. Since February:

A former member of Shapp's cabinet, Frank C. Hilton, has been convicted in two different federal courts of extorting more than $100,000 in kickbacks from people doing business with the state Department of Property and Supplies when Hilton was head of the department.

A federal judge sentenced a state senator — Frank Mazzei, an Allegheny County Democrat — to five years imprisonment for extorting more than $20,000 in political kickbacks from officials of a firm for which the Senator arranged two state real estate leases. Mazzei was expelled from the Senate recently.

A county court convicted a top official of the Democratic State Committee, state Democratic treasurer William Casper, of forcing state employees and private contractors working for the commonwealth to make political contributions.

Forced political contributions not new to either party

Thornburgh, who prosecuted both the Mazzei and Hilton cases, said he believes that during Hilton's four years as Shapp's secretary of the Department of Property and Supplies, "everything was for sale in that department."

Thornburgh shares Shapp's assessment that the system wasn't invented or initiated by Shapp Democrats.

It's unfair to assume this is something they dreamed up on their own," Thornburgh said. "A lot of this goes back to when the Republicans were in power. . . . There are indications that a lot of these practices are carry overs from previous administrations."

One well-placed Republican source knowledgeable of patronage and pork-barrelling practices of the last GOP administration said he agrees with both Thornburgh and Shapp.

When Shafer Republicans handed out government contracts, "We took care of those who took care of us," this source said. The source added that Shapp Democrats have hardly changed the system since Gov. Shafer left office in 1971. Shafer Republicans did "everything they (Shapp Democrats) have done," the source says.

The Pennsylvania system generates political funding from two main sources — state jobholders and businessmen and compaines holding state contracts.

Politicians like to say that the widespread, ancient practice of extracting political donations from state employees, or "macing," has disappeared since state workers unionized in the early 1970s.

But this is not true. Because of the unions, politicians find it more difficult to mace state workers than they did five years ago. Macing is not practiced as widely as it was in 1970. However, as the Pennsylvania Crime Commission said in a formal report issued last year, "the (state) law prohibiting macing is clear, but in spite of it, the practice goes on."

Macing has been such a successful technique for political money-raisers that "next week, if the union wasn't here, they'd be back in business again," says a top official of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO. This official added that a five-year effort by AFSCME to destroy macing has diminished it but hasn't stopped it.

Firms and businessmen holding state contracts and leases frequently "make contributions to at least assist in, if not assure, their consideration for contracts with the state," according to an official report filed late last year by the legislature's select committee on state contract practices.

Others, having been selected on a merit basis for state business, find themselves coerced after the fact into kicking back fixed dollar amounts or fixed percentages of the money they earn in order to maintain their contracts or in order to renew them," the report continued.

Admittedly, not all state employees are pressured into making political contributions; nor are all businessmen and companies with state contracts required to pay political kickbacks.

But critics of the Pennsylvania system have said they believe pressure tactics are still employed on a significant scale.

The legislature's select committee, now defunct, expressed it this way: "The spoils system

... pervades state government today, a system which rewards political connections and kickbacks rather than competence and integrity."

Regardless of their party affiliations, politicians and political workers appear to view government power as a legitimate tool to produce political funds. This is an attitude that was rarely challenged until recently.

"We have heard many witnesses testify there is nothing wrong with extortion as long as the money is extorted for the party," a special Butler County investigating grand jury said in a report issued last month about its extensive probe of the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation.

But the jurors, whose investigation focused on political contributions extracted from Penn DOT employees and private contractors working for Penn DOT, disagreed. "We feel that extortion is extortion regardless of where the money goes," their report said.

The Grand Jury described the money-raising system as a "cancer which threatens to destroy state government."

Leaked confidential material before

No CIA data for talkative legislator

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Armed Services Committee voted Monday to withhold secret CIA data from one of its former members because he had leaked confidential materials when he was a member.

On a 16-13 vote, the committee took the action against Rep. Michael Harrington, D-Mass., who had been a member of the committee during the 93rd Congress. Harrington said despite the closeness of the vote it was "predictable" and "not surprising".

Rep. Richard H. Ichord, D-Mo., proposed the motion to deny Harrington further access to the committee's secret files on grounds he had previously violated committee and House rules by leaking secret material.

Harrington, now a member of the House Select Committee investigating the CIA, had requested Armed Services Committee material's on the CIA's efforts to raise a sunken Soviet submarine in the Pacific and other matters.

The Massachusetts congressman was also involved in another House battle Monday over the resignation of Rep. Lucien Nedzi, D-Mich., as chairman of the Select Committee. Harrington accused Nedzi of keeping quiet about CIA briefings on political assassinations in foreign countries.

Harrington, who describes himself as "anti-establishment," caused a furor last fall when he admittedly passed on information to the Washington Post relating to CIA efforts to undermine the Marxist government of President Salvador Allende of Chile which was toppled in 1973.

Harrington said Monday he passed on that material after he learned that the New York Times had obtained similar information.

Ford signs jobs bill for youth

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford signed a bill Monday to provide $473 million to give jobs to 840,400 economically disadvantaged young people this summer.

The program will provide nine to 12 weeks of work, at 26 hours a week and paying a minimum of $2.10 an hour, to youths aged 14 to 22.

Communist party rolls up big gains at Italian polls

RÔME (UPI) — Italy's Communists forged smashing gains Monday, expanding their "Red Belt" control of the nation's central regions and climbing to within nearly one per cent of the Christian Democrats as the nation's largest party.

With 96 per cent of the total vote counted, the Communists polled 33.7 per cent of the vote, an increase of nearly six per cent over the last regional elections in 1970. The Christian Democrats won 35 per cent, a drop of nearly three per cent.

The Communists scored gains in every province voting and outpolled the Christian Democrats in Rome, Milan, Turin, Naples and Venice for the first time in history.

The results gave the largest Communist party in the West control of the regional council in Liguria, which curves around the Gulf of Genoa, in coalition with the Socialists and deadlocked them with the Christian Democrats for control of the Marche region on the Adriatic coast and Piedmont on the French border.

The stunning victory by the largest Communist party in the West strengthened their hand to bid for a share in the government. The Socialists hinted at a possible government crisis after the election and the Christian Democrats called an emergency party directorate meeting to conduct a post mortem on the results.

What's news

PUC rate decision today

HARRISBURG — The Public Utility Commission today will act on PP&L's proposed $75.8 million proposed rate increase. The PUC's bureau of rates and research and law bureau have recommended that the first step of the hike — $20.3 million — be put into effect Thursday. The PP&L case is the first time in the history of the PUC that public hearings have been held before any part of an increase is granted. If the PUC allows PP&L its hike, rates for the utility's customers would go up by about four per cent on Thursday. The second part of the hike — which would raise rates another 11 per cent — could be delayed for further investigation.

Navy planes sabotaged

WASHINGTON — A Navy spokesman disclosed Monday that 18 training planes at the Naval Air Station in Pensacola, Fla., were deliberately damaged early Monday morning in acts either of vandalism or sabotage. The spokesman said there were 12 TA4 Skyhawk and six T2C Buckeye aircraft that sustained damage "consisting of cut wire-bundles and severed fuel and hydraulic lines."

Cuba wants to return ransom

WASHINGTON — Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., announced Monday that Cuba had agreed to return $2 million in ransom obtained by skyjackers in 1972 for Southern Airways. Prime Minister Fidel Castro, in a letter to McGovern, said his government has decided to give a positive answer to requests the money be returned to the airline. McGovern said he received Castro's letter last Friday. Castro said he considered the request by McGovern and Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, "to be reasonable."

Top Japanese official attacked

TOKYO — A 34-year-old Japanese nationalist attacked Prime Minister Takeo Miki at funeral services for former Prime Minister Eisaku Sato Monday, knocking him to the ground with blows to the face and sending his glasses flying. Miki was intercepted at the entrance to Tokyo's Budokan Hall for the national funeral. He was not seriously hurt but was forced to cut short his presence at an official reception because doctors advised him to rest. His assailant, identified as Hiroyoshi Fudeyasu, a member of the right-wing Great Japan Nationalist Party, rushed Miki from behind and hit him twice on the face.

Turkey may close spy bases

ANKARA — Turkey may close U.S. intelligence gathering bases on the Black Sea opposite the Soviet Union's coastline in response to the arms embargo imposed by the U.S. Congress over the Cyprus invasion, government sources said Monday. Government sources said this could also mean an early closing of the 25 U.S. military bases in Turkey. They said the government may soon announce a timetable for the closure. Government sources said Turkey's National Defense Council and cabinet discussed the measures as an answer to the U.S. arms embargo.

'Fear' pamphlets legal

NEW YORK — The Appellate Division of State Supreme Court Monday cleared the way for police and fire unions to distribute skull-and-crossbones leaflets calling New York "Fear City" and warning tourists to stay away. The city had sought to stop the unions, who are upset about proposed budget cuts in the number of policemen and firemen. But the Appellate Division ruled unanimously the unions have a constitutional right to distribute the leaflets. At the same time, the five justices cautioned union leaders that their ruling was "not to be deemed in any way approval of the conduct of the defendants."

9 die in bus crash

BEATTOCK, Scotland — A tourist bus crowded with senior citizens on holiday collided head-on with a runaway tractor-trailer truck on the main highway, 55 miles south of Glasgow Monday. Police said nine persons, including the bus driver were killed, and 33 passengers hospitalized, 22 of them with serious injuries. No one aboard the bus escaped unharmed. It was the second European bus crash in two days involving elderly tourists. A bus carrying elderly pensioners on a similar outing crashed Sunday in Austria, killing 21 persons and injuring 25.

Mother avoids jail term

BOSTON — Mrs. Roberta Shaffer, convicted of shooting her boyfriend to death, Monday won her dramatic fight to stay out of prison in order to care for her dying daughter. The Massachusetts Parole Board placed her on parole for two and one-half years. On hearing the decision, Mrs. Shaffer, 28, brushed aside her long dark hair and said in a barely audible voice, "Now I can go home and take care of my family." Her daughter, Eve, who turned 11 years old two weeks ago, is terminally ill with cystic fibrosis. Mrs. Shaffer also has a son, Eric, seven.

Arabs, Israelis trade gun fire

By United Press International

Arab and Israeli gunners duelled across the Lebanese border Monday and the Israeli military command accused Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon of concentrating forces along the frontier with Israel.

A mother died of her wounds, bringing to seven the total of Israelis and Arabs killed in the guerrilla raid on the northern settlement of Yuval Sunday.

Despite the stepped-up fighting, two Israeli newspapers quoted senior Israeli officials in Washington as saying there was a 50-50 chance for an interim Israeli-Egyptian peace agreement.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin flew home after holding extended talks with President Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

On his arrival in Tel Aviv, Rabin said he expected no immediate results from his trip to Washington.

"The purpose of my trip was to try to talk out all the aspects of the Middle East situation and to examine all possibilities of a peace agreement," he said. "I expect no dramatic results until it all goes through the usual diplomatic channels."

A Lebanese spokesman said Israeli gunners battered Lebanese farmlands in a pre-dawn barrage Monday, injuring four villagers.

Israeli military sources said artillery shells fired from Lebanon slammed into the northern Israeli town of Metulla and the settlement of Kfar Giladi. No casualties or damage were reported. Israeli gunners returned fire, the sources said.

The sources said guerrillas had concentrated all along the frontier, with the biggest grouping at the village of Aita ech Chaab. The village has been a frequent target of Israeli ground assaults directed against guerrilla bases.

W. German President welcomed by Ford

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford Monday welcomed West German President Walter Scheel with a promise that the United States will stand by its strong commitments to the defense of Western Europe.

With military ceremonial fanfare, Ford greeted Scheel as the first president of the Federal Republic of Germany to visit Washington in 17 years.

In his welcoming remarks, Ford said, "The United States is strongly committed to safeguarding the freedom of the West."

"We remain committed to the freedom and security of Berlin," he added. Furthermore,

Ford said that the United States sees the security of Western Europe as "a true test of the process as what is known as détente."

Scheel came bearing a $1 million bicentennial gift — a fund to be established in the name of former U.S. high commissioner to Germany, John J. McCloy, which will be used to further German-American exchanges of future leaders of both countries. The exchange scholarships will be open to politicians, trade unionists and journalists among other groups.

During a ceremony in the Rose Garden under a light rain, Scheel said there was room for improvement in the understanding between Germans and Americans.

South Vietnamese teachers reeducated

SAIGON (UPI) — South Vietnamese high schools and universities will reopen as soon as teachers have been "reeducated" and new history and social science courses are written to conform with political changes, Deputy Education Minister Le Van Chi has reported.

Chi said in a televised interview Sunday (delayed by relay through Hanoi) that religious schools would be allowed to reopen, but they will operate under the same rules governing other private schools and that religious studies will be banned.

"Teachers are being reeducated now in the new social and political courses in conformity with the new policy before taking their assignments," Chi said.

"The universities' faculty of letters and law will have to be reorganized before being reactivated. Political and social science courses will be changed."

Cambodians perish by thousands

LONDON (UPI) — Tens of thousands of Cambodians have perished, some of starvation, and others by execution, under the new regime there, the Daily Telegraph said Monday.

"Reliable reports indicate that Cambodia is now in the midst of what may prove to be one of the most profound human tragedies in recent times," the newspaper said.

The dispatch was datelined Bangkok and quoted Western diplomats as saying "tens of thousands have already died, and are continuing to die, as the doctrinaire Khmer Rouge victors ruthlessly pursue their goal of establishing 'the only true peasants' revolution in Southeast Asia."

"Teachers are being reeducated now in the new social and political courses in conformity with the new policy before taking their assignments," Chi said.

"The universities' faculty of letters and law will have to be reorganized before being reactivated. Political and social science courses will be changed."

He did not give any examples of changes, but presumably the new Communist government's views of recent history in Vietnam will be taught.

All indications so far are that pure sciences such as mathematics and technical courses will remain basically unchanged in all schools. Sale of books in those fields is permitted.

On the question of religious schools and universities, Chi said such schools in the past taught a normal curriculum with some religious studies inserted into the regular courses.

Indira Gandhi talked out of resigning post

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi wanted to resign last week when she was convicted of election malpractices, but top-ranking colleagues talked her out of it, one of her most influential supporters said Monday.

Street demonstrations calling for Mrs. Gandhi's resignation erupted into violence for the first time since opposition calls for her removal began after her conviction five days ago.

The protesters, members of the opposition right-wing Jana Sangh Party, broke through two police cordons in their march down Parliament street before halting outside the AIR building.

UPI photographer Ramesh C. Pande said the demonstrators accused the radio network of favoring Mrs. Gandhi in its national newscasts.

The embattled prime minister's near resignation was disclosed by Zail Singh, Chief minister of the Western Indian state of Punjab. He said the 58-year-old Mrs. Gandhi wanted to resign as soon as she heard the surprise high court decision against her.

However, Singh said, Mrs. Gandhi decided to stick to the helm because of the "unanimous mandate" of her cabinet ministers and ruling Congress Party leaders.

The right-wing demonstrators, numbering about 200, fought with riot police in a kicking and shoving match as they tried to storm the entrance of the government-run All-India radio building.

"Another opening, another show . . . in Philly, Boston or Baltimore" . . . AND Mountainhome, Pennsylvania! Next Tuesday, June 24th, The Rowena Steven's Pocono Playhouse will open for its 29th season!!! THAT'S GOOD NEWS!!!! Wyckoff's are delighted to announce that for the 3rd year they will sponsor the "Backstage at the Pocono Playhouse with Sally Ferrebee" to be heard over WYPO following the 11:30 news beginning Wednesday morning, June 25th.

Already there is an electric feeling in the air, for as Irving Berlin so perfectly exclaimed, "There's NO business like Show Business" . . . and following in the dedicated footsteps of the late Rowena Stevens is Jack Lovett . . . capable, knowing; and as Rowena's associate producer for many years, equally as discriminating!

The schedule is a humdinger!!!! Brilliant comedienne, Pat Carroll (who was the subject of an Earl Wilson column last week as "Something's Afoot" is delighting audiences in the New York area at this moment) will bring a musical mystery that is fun for the WHOLE FAMILY . . . you CAN bring the kids! It will play for two weeks, June 24th thru July 5th! Then, the Theatre Guild production of Jerome Chodorov's, "The Culture Caper" with Gabe Dell . . . whose experience in every medium promises a glowing performance July 8th thru the 12th!

Van Johnson will return to the Poconos on July 15th to star in "Send Me No Flowers" and this is one performer that needs no introduction, and you'll love him in this play! . . . There isn't anyone . . . man, woman or child, that would not adore "The Boy-friend!! It's aglow with good music, great costumes AND the setting of the 20's that includes a Charleston number you'll be humming for weeks afterwards! Anne Russell, who starred so marvelously in "Mame" a season or so ago will star, and she is a tremendous performer!! Make your reservations now for the two-week stay . . . July 22nd thru August 2nd!

Tennessee Williams' Pulitzer Prize winning play, "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" will move in August 5th thru the 9th . . . with Sandy Dennis . . . who won an Academy Award for her performance with Elizabeth Taylor in "Who's Afraid of Virginia Wolf." This should be an unforgettable week at the Playhouse and you must not miss it!!!! Following the tremendous dramatic impact of "Cat," and playing Tuesday, August 12th thru the 16th . . . Cole Porter's most fabulous musical, "Kiss Me Kate!" (From whence our opening phrase was taken!) It's gay, it's sentimental . . . it's Cole . . . nuff said! . . . The number to call for reservations is 595-7456!

Returning in all her glory, August 19th thru August 23rd, that beautiful lady who is undoubtedly THE most beautiful . . . inside and out . . . ever to grace a stage . . . the gorgeous Kitty Carlisle . . . will SING in more of the incomparable Cole Porter words and music in "You Never Know." Last, but certainly not least . . . a personal friend to many people in our community . . . and a favorite of everyone, Hans Conreid . . . will star with dear Lou Jacobi in Neil Simon's, "The Sunshine Boys" August 26th thru August 30th! WOW!!!! WHAT A SEASON! A FRIDAY MATINEE has been added to the weekly schedule . . . so the Playhouse will open on Tuesday . . . with matinees, Wednesday, Friday AND Saturday . . . no Monday performance! Come to the Playhouse . . . Broadway in the Poconos . . . and listen for Wyckoff's "Backstage at the Pocono Playhouse" on Wednesday mornings . . . it IS "another opening, another show" in the Rowena Steven's Pocono Playhouse . . . a real reason to rejoice here in the Poconos!!!!

Fire hall news . . . Church changes . . . no sale

By MAUREEN RUFÉ
Pocono Record Reporter
BRODHEADSVILLE — By a 10-9 vote, George Kitchen has been replaced as chief of the Blue Ridge Fire Company in Saylorsburg after serving in the position, reportedly, for more than 25 years. Jim Eckley is the new chief.

Other officers are Gene Hafler, assistant chief; Jack

Eckley, captain; Pete Goss, lieutenant; Sherwood Clapper, lieutenant, and Bob Bowen, engineer.

Also, Claude Bond, president; Carl Frable, vice president; John Frailey, treasurer and Pete Goss, secretary.

Trustees elected were Ronald Herman, Ron Dietrich, Carl Frable, Pete Goss and Bob Bowen.

A reliable source tells us in a short time the Kunkletown Volunteer Fire Company will be hooked into the Monroe County Control Center for fire calls, too. There was some doubt previously as to whether the radio signaling system could be beamed into Kunkletown during all kinds of weather, but with the installation of a new tower, that problem has been eliminated.

Rumors are circulating fast and furiously that Leo Romascavage has purchased the House of Webb in Kresgeville for a quarter of a million dollars. Actually, no deal has been finalized at all, and we understand that if an agreement is reached in the deal, it will be a leasing-type arrangement.

And speaking of Kresgeville, that installation of motels scheduled to be built on Rte. 209 just north of the firehouse has fallen through, according to a reliable source.

The Rev. Paul Xander, pastor of the Zion United Church Lutheran, will be on vacation from June 18 to June 25. If you need the services of a pastor during that time, call The Rev. David Ritterpusch, 992-6601.

Pastor installation scheduled

HAMILTON SQUARE — A special day of celebration will be held at the Christ Hamilton United Lutheran Church in Hamilton Square beginning at 11 a.m., June 22, to mark the official installation of The Rev. David Ritterpusch as first pastor of the all-new Lutheran church.

Nine former pastors who served the Hamilton Square church, as well as other charges in the West End, have been invited to attend the special church ceremonies and a special covered-dish dinner following at the Brainerd Center in Snydersville.

Those invited include: The Rev. Benjamin Bergstresser, the Rev. Robert Zuch, the Rev. James Shannon, the Rev. Adan Bohner, the Rev. Larry Buss, the Rev. Norman Kellow, the Rev. Graham Rinehart, the Rev. Earl Marks, and the Rev. Fred Blank.

The Rev. Dr. Wilson Toussaint, president of the Northeastern Pennsylvania Lutheran Synod, will conduct the official installation ceremonies and will give the sermon.

The covered-dish supper will be held until 5 p.m. Friends of the former pastors and of Christ Hamilton United Lutheran Church are invited to attend both the morning service and the dinner following. Guests should bring a covered dish. Everything else will be provided.

Bible school scheduled

STROUDSBURG — The Calvary Baptist Church of Stroudsburg west will conduct free evening Bible School from 7 to 9 p.m. June 22-27.

Classes will be conducted for all age groups including a nursery. Dr. Gordon Lovik, professor at Central Baptist Theological Seminary, will conduct adult classes on marriage and the home.

More information can be obtained by calling 992-6757 or 992-6701.

Square really knows how to ring its chimes! Dedication ceremonies for a new $3,500 carillon will be held Friday and Saturday. The new chimes are a memorial gift from several members of the congregation. The carillon will sound the traditional Westminster chime and strike the hours throughout the day as a public service for the community.

The chimes, however, will only be turned on for the hours between 10 a.m. and 9 p.m. They will strike on the half-hour Monday thru Saturday and will be silent on Sunday.

The unique instrument consists of two clock-controlled magnetic tape players with an audio amplification system. The carillon will be set to play special selections at 12 noon and 6 p.m.

The next board meeting of the Western Pocono Jaycees will be held on June 19 with the next softball game against Mt. Pocono on tap for June 22. And a reminder that the newsletter deadline this month is June 23.

Just who will win the Old Toilet Seat? That important question may not be keeping you awake these nights, but it is something that's on the minds of the members of both the Christ Hamilton United Lutheran Church and the Zion United Church Lutheran in Brodheadsville. Annually, the picnic held by the two strongest members of both congregations compete in a tug of war to see which church gets the toilet seat prize. The pull is set for July 26, and if you aren't doing anything that day, plan to attend the annual picnic held by the two strongest members of both churches.

Truck mishap

SNYDERSVILLE — A truck's unsuccessful attempt to pass a car caused no injuries and $1,100 damages in a Sunday morning accident.

State police at Swiftwater said a truck operated by John F. Weiss III, 22, East Stroudsburg R.D. 2 was traveling north on Route 33 near Snydersville at 7:15 a.m. Sunday.

Weiss reportedly attempted to pass a northbound car driven by Galen D. Robbins, 41, Lancaster, but his truck struck the left rear of the car.

The car spun around and stopped facing south while the truck came to rest on the guard-rails.

The accident caused $700 damages to the truck and $400 to the car.

Power out

SHAWNEE — A one-car crash destroyed a car and disrupted service to one Metropolitan Edison customer at 4:45 p.m. Sunday.

State police at Swiftwater said a car operated by Rubin Strouse, 59, of Easton, was traveling east on Hollow Road a quarter mile east of Shawnee when it struck a utility pole.

Strouse was uninjured but his car was demolished, according to police. A Met Ed spokesman said service was disrupted to one customer for an hour.

Bar burglary

MOUNT POCONO — Thieves broke a window to enter an unlocked building between June 7 and 12 and stole $849 worth of barroom equipment.

State police at Swiftwater said John Messing, 34, Mount Pocono, reported Saturday that someone broke into the Pocono Mountain Inn on Route 191.

Thieves took bar tables, stainless steel speed racks, four coachman's lights and four metal partitions.

Wind Gap notes

WIND GAP — The Episcopal Church Women of St. Mary's and St. Joseph's Churches will sponsor a dinner at 8 p.m., June 17, at the Bushkill Center Hotel to mark the end of activities for the year. The cost of the dinner is $7.26. Reservations can be made by calling Anna Malons, 863-6590, Anna Butz, 863-6721, or Palma Manento, 863-4865.

PEN ARGYL — The Faith United Presbyterian Church will hold a strawberry festival at 5 p.m., June 21 at the church.

P.M.'s new mover

One driver for 40 buses

SWIFTWATER — Barry Steele, formerly a transportation specialist in the Bethlehem School District, has been named transportation manager of the Pocono Mountain School District.

Steele replaces Joseph W. Murray, who will return next year to the district's middle school to become a full-time social studies teacher.

Steele, 27, said he moved from Bethlehem, where he was born, to the Poconos because he enjoyed the area and considers running a $530,000 a year transportation department a challenge.

He is married, an avid hunter and gardener and lives in Pocono Summit. He took over his $15,000 a year post May 27.

Steele said he will spend the summer recharting some of the district's 40 bus routes, discussing safety education programs with elementary principals, monitoring transportation payroll and purchases and supervising bus mechanics.

He added he plans no major shifts in bus routes.

One thing worries him, he said: Whether a child will run in front of a school bus someday. Steele said he plans an elementary safety program to head off those situations.

Along with the challenge of transporting 3,700 students over 325 square miles come long hours, he said. Pointing to a picture of Don Quixote on his office wall, Steele said his job is like that of the famed idealist. "You have to get knocked around."

The district owns 27 buses and contracts for 13 more. Transportation accounts for about one twelfth of the district budget. In the Bethlehem School District, Steele helped operate 65 buses, which shipped 8,000 students to 27 public and 15 parochial schools.

NOTICE

To The Customers Of Stroudsburg
Municipal Authority
In Stroudsburg And
Stroud Township:

Please take notice that water rates will be increased by approximately 15% effective July 1, 1975. The increase in the standard 4-fixture residence rate will be $5.00 per year, or about 1.37 cents per day. Your bill may vary slightly from this rate depending on use of additional fixtures.

This increase in rates is the first since January 1, 1969 and is made necessary because of increases in labor, electric power costs for pumping water and the cost of water treatment materials. Also, the Authority has just completed installation of an emergency power generator at the Filter Plant, at a cost of $39,000, to insure a continuation of water service in case of a power failure. Many other capital improvements have been made over the past several years to improve the water service.

The Board of the Authority regrets this increase in rate but can see no other alternative to meet increasing costs of operation and the mandated requirements of the Trust Indenture securing Water Revenue Bonds covering the interest and principal payments on Bond issues.

White House press briefings: A waste of waiting

By DENNIS FARNEY
Dow Jones-Offsetway News

WASHINGTON — If this is the White House, then who are those guys playing poker?

Somhow, a table of cigar-chomping gamblers is about the last thing one expects to find a mere 200 feet or so from President Ford's Oval Office. But the card players gather here nearly every weekday morning. They are television and radio technicians, and they are . . . waiting.

The scene is rather bizarre — but then, bizarre things happen nearly every day in this part of the White House. Most mornings, for example, find grown men — more technicians — gathered before a TV set. They are watching something important, no doubt? No, grown men are watching "Hollywood Square" and . . . waiting.

Most mornings also find 50 or 60 high-powered people milling around in two adjoining rooms — a million or so dollars worth of talent just . . . waiting. They are White House correspondents and, like everybody else, they are waiting for Press Secretary Ron Nessen and his daily press briefing — an institution that may be the most bizarre happening of all.

This daily question-and-answer session isn't nearly as well-known as the presidential news conference. The White House hardly ever allows it to appear on television. (Those technicians are on hand just in case.) Mr. Nessen doesn't enjoy conducting the briefing, and reporters don't enjoy going to it. It has its own arcane rules and, almost like some small village, it has its village notables and its village idiots. And yet, day in and day out, this curious institution may well be the single most important determinant of the news most Americans will get about their President and his policies.

Reporters jokingly call the briefing their "daily feeding." But the briefing is at least as important to the White House as it is to the press. For it is through the information the press secretary chooses to disclose there that the White House attempts to portray itself in the best possible light.

Reporters, of course, try to go beyond the briefing by arranging their own interviews. Even so, Mr. Nessen's daily remarks can't be ignored and often figure heavily in their reports. This is particularly true of national television correspondents, who must boil things down into brief summaries, and the major wire services, whose White House coverage is about all that subscribers to scores of smaller newspapers ever read.

A typical briefing is a standing-room-only crowd of reporters trying to browbeat, wheedle and cajole increments of information out of a press secretary who evades, quibbles and obfuscates. A briefing is Ron Nessen, as part of a job that pays $42,500 a year, informing reporters that Gerald Ford will play golf on Saturday, had an English muffin for breakfast, is building a swimming pool or met with a beauty queen. A briefing is reporter Sarah McClendon heatedly telling Mr. Nessen that "the whole United States" demands an answer to a question she has just asked.

Some briefings have literally put reporters to sleep. But one briefing last fall left Mr. Nessen so angry, that upon going home, he jumped on his motorcycle and roared around town until he felt better. And last Friday's briefing, an unusually acrimonious affair, found angry reporters calling Mr. Nessen "a liar," accusing him of a "coverup" and, after 55 minutes of unproductive questioning, informing him that they didn't want to listen to him any more that day. Whereupon Mr. Nessen spun on his heel and left in a huff.

In retrospect, it appears that reporters were roasting the wrong man. Mr. Nessen was only trying to pull Nelson Rockefeller's chestnuts from the fire.

The ebullient Vice President had told the world that his Rockefeller Commission report on Central Intelligence Agency wrong-doing would be given to newsmen last Friday. The only trouble was, he didn't clear this arrangement with the President, who ruled that he would decide when the sensitive study would be released. "Ron was sent out to take the heat," says a sympathetic White House staffer, and to argue that the abrupt change of plans was not a "coverup" of some sort.

The resulting confrontation is one indication of how the very atmosphere of the briefing has changed in recent years, particularly since Watergate.

As late as the Johnson administration, briefings were informal affairs of reporters gathered around the press secretary's desk. Then President Nixon decided to board over the White House swimming pool to create a formal "briefing room," complete with an elevated podium for the press secretary. Almost overnight, the atmosphere subtly shifted into an us-vs.-them confrontation. Also helping, of course, was the man up on the podium, the chronically evasive Ronald Ziegler.

President Ford's Mr. Nessen is friendlier and a good deal more helpful in private. But the role of spokesman has built-in limitations and in the formal briefing sessions he is often about as guarded as Mr. Ziegler was. Some newsmen think the press is largely wasting its time grilling him each day. Says Richard Dudman, Washington bureau chief of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch: "Both Ziegler and Nessen have been inadequate targets for serious questioning."

But a paradoxical thing seems to be happening: Although press secretaries may be giving out fewer and fewer real answers, reporters are asking them more and more questions. Watergate has left newsmen more skeptical and aggressive than before. White House correspondents are painfully aware that they played little part in unearthing that scandal. They were pinned down listening to Ron Ziegler while non-White House reporters were coming up with the real story outside.

And now, contends Peter Lisagor, the veteran White House correspondent of the Chicago Daily News, "the briefing has taken on a life of its own. It's become a kind of show."

Interviews and war games

The show begins when a White House loudspeaker summons reporters into the briefing room. Looking rather like a man on his way to a duel, Mr. Nessen enters from the opposite side, accompanied by his first assistant, second assistant, third assistant, several other aides, a secretary and a stenographer.

Mr. Nessen and top White House figures have spent about 40 man-hours this forenoon, just preparing for this moment. Mr. Nessen has interviewed the President, has interviewed the President's key assistants, has even war-gamed possible questions and answers with his staff. In his hand is a loose-leaf binder full of typed-out, prepared-in-advance answers to questions that may not even come up.

Any reporter can ask any question he can think of. That's one unwritten rule. Mr. Nessen can't stop answering questions until the senior wire service correspondent yells, "Thank you!" That's another rule. No reporter may leave the briefing room to file a story until the "thank you!" that's a third rule, designed to give every reporter an equal crack at breaking the news.

There are practical reasons for every rule. But taken together, the rules create an ironic situation where Ron Nessen and a roomful of reporters regularly find themselves trapped — locked together in a big room above an empty swimming pool in an open-ended, who-knows-how-long-this-will-last encounter.

Splendid irrelevancies

Since there is no time limit, there is no incentive for either Mr. Nessen or his interrogators to be brief. But there is ample incentive — on both sides — for splendid irrelevancies, hair-splitting, sarcasm and verbal grandstanding. The typical briefing runs 45 to 90 minutes, and in that time reporters often manage to irritate not only Mr. Nessen but each other.

White House reporters are periodically accused of practicing "pack journalism" — of blindly following each other to similar stories with similar conclusions on any given day. The accusers would find supporting evidence in the briefing.

In one briefing in March, for example, Mr. Nessen drew no fewer than 85 questions on whether or not the Central Intelligence Agency is now, or has ever been, in the business of assassinating foreign political leaders. The press secretary, obviously under strict orders to avoid comment on this sensitive matter, replied:

"I am not going to say anything about that, Jim."

"I am just not going to say anything about it, Steve."

"I am just not going to talk about it."

"Wait, I am not going to talk about it."

And so on until it became clear that no matter how this question was phrased, Mr. Nessen really wasn't going to talk about it. "Thank you!" yelled Frank Cormier of the Associated Press — and the White House press corps started its collective dash out the room to the telephones.

Wait a minute, an exasperated Mr. Nessen called out. He had spent most of his morning, he fumed, preparing himself for questions on Cambodia. How come nobody wants to know about Cambodia? Maybe tomorrow, someone said.

The next day the reporters gave Mr. Nessen his wish — 59 questions about Cambodia. This gave him a chance to make the point the White House obviously had wanted him to make: Congress should quit stalling and approve military aid for Cambodia (this, of course, was before the country fell to the Communists).

But no one asked that day about the burning subject of the day before, the CIA. Finally, Mr. Nessen brought it up himself. He had checked, he said, and could now report that Gerald Ford "is opposed" to political assassinations. This reopened the whole subject, and soon Mr. Nessen was saying:

"I am not going to be able to answer any other questions on the CIA matter."

"I am not going to be able to answer . . ."

"I am not . . ."

And so on.

More, not fewer?

What such episodes demonstrate to some is that the White House, in any administration, will use the briefing to say only what it wants to say, and no more. If so, some reporters argue, why not stop having regular, scheduled briefings, or at least clamp a time limit on each one?

Mr. Nessen rather likes both ideas. "We waste a lot of time at the briefing playing with words," he complains.

Even so, nothing much is likely to come of the ideas for change, because a solid majority of the White House press appears to oppose them. Some reporters, in fact, argue forcefully for more briefings (there once were two a day).

"Our business is to try to get information out, not to acquiesce in anything that would have the potential of cutting information down," says James Deakin of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, a White House reporter since 1954.

Beatle wins stay

WASHINGTON — We reported last August that Watergate tactics had been used against John Lennon, one of the four musical Beatles, to oust him from the United States.

Our revelations, combined with the superb legal work of attorney Leon Wildes, have persuaded the government to consider letting Lennon stay here indefinitely.

The attempt to deport him was based upon a minor drug charge that had been brought against him in England. The former Beatle pleaded guilty in 1968 to the unwitting possession of a tiny amount of hashish.

Wildes came up with proof, however, that the United States harbors hundreds of ex-felons, many with far more serious drug records, under the "nonpriority" status that permits them to stay in the country. For that matter, murders, rapists, robbers and even one bigamist are allowed to remain for "humanitarian" reasons.

Impressed by this evidence and stung by our Watergate charges, federal prosecutor Paul Curran has written to the judge handling the case that the Immigration Service will "undertake a review of the question of possible nonpriority status" for the singing star.

Curran made plain that none of the immigration officials who had participated in the Watergate tactics would be permitted to work on the review. What all this means is that Lennon now has a better-than-even chance to stay in the United States as long as he wishes.

Meanwhile, we have obtained startling, additional documentary proof of our charges that Lennon was singled out for special Watergate treatment.

The deportation attempt, as we previously reported, came out of the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, which still continues to stir up the old witches' brew of the McCarthy era in a dark corner of the Senate basement.

The staff prepared a smear sheet against Lennon, falsely linking him with militants who were supposed to be plotting at the time to disrupt the 1972 Republican convention.

The false memo was slipped to stern, old Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., who forwarded it in a "Personal and Confidential" letter to Atty. Gen. John Mitchell on Feb. 4, 1972.

Addressing Mitchell as "Dear John," Thurmond urged: "This appears to me to be an important matter, and I think it would be well for it to be considered at the highest level . . . Many headaches might be avoided if appropriate action be taken in time."

At the bottom of the letter, in Thurmond's military scrawl, is his signator "Strom" and his comment that "I also sent Bill Timmons (a White House aide) a copy of the memorandum."

Thurmond's letter was turned over to Richard Kleindienst, then the deputy attorney general, who fired off a note to Immigration Commissioner Ray Farrell. "Ray," wrote Kleindienst, "When is (Lennon) coming? Do we — if we so elect — have any basis to deny his admittance?"

Farrell put Associate Commissioner James Greene on the case. The confidential files show that Greene contacted the New York office whose director Sol Marks, recounted in a "memorandum for files": "Associate Commissioner Greene telephonically advised today that we should immediately revoke the voluntary departure granted to John Lennon and his wife.

"Mr. Greene further stated that under no circumstances should this office approve the (preliminary application to remain in the U.S.) filed by Lennon. This is a direction of Commissioner Farrell personally."

But Lennon, who has generated $50 million worth of business in the United States along with untold tax revenues, decided to fight back. Characteristically, he put his appeal to music.

"Nobody came to bug us, hustle us or shove us," he sang, "so we decided to make (the U.S.) our home. If the Man wants to shove us out, we gonna jump and shout, 'The Statue of Liberty said, come.'"

Assassination plots

Jeffrey Hart

Some years ago, I remember sitting in a pub in Oxford, England, with a former high official in the CIA. He was "former" because during the early 1950s the agency had purged him along with numerous other Right-wingers and hard anti-Communists. The agency had shifted from its former tough anti-Left position to a strategy of co-optation. It had decided to work with the Left in Europe and elsewhere, even the near-Communist Left, in order to isolate the actual Communists. For the new strategy, the CIA Right-wingers were ill suited; hence the purge.

Anyway, as we sat there drinking Guinness, the report came over the BBC of an assassination attempt against then President Sukarno of Indonesia. It had been badly bungled. "All the marks of a CIA operation," remarked my friend. "Everyone got killed except Sukarno." That, in fact, was about the way it turned out.

We are now hearing a great deal about supposed CIA involvement in assassination plots against assorted foreign politicians, and, naturally, a great deal of righteous indignation is emanating from all quarters. I can hardly wait to hear from Senator Lowell Weicker. It is easy enough after all to come out four-square against murder.

More complicated

But the real world, as usual, is a bit more complicated than the rhetorical one and even more complicated than the legal one. This is true, even though, with Watergate in mind, it might be entertaining in an ironic way to see notable Kennedy retainers brought to trial by the Justice Department for their involvement in assassination plots back in the 1960s.

Though assassination is a delicate enough subject, we had best look directly at it in a unblinking way.

First of all, it would not make much sense to rule out assassination categorically and absolutely.

For the 20th century imagination, Adolf Hitler is always the test case. And we have in fact made moral heroes of the men who tried to kill him in the July 20, 1944, bomb plot — Count Klaus von Stauffenberg, Carl Goerdler, Henning von Tresckow, and all the others. In Dietrich Bonhoeffer, the theologian — another plotter — the idea of assassinating Hitler even acquires a sort of religious sanction.

But if it was a good idea to assassinate Hitler in 1944, why wouldn't it have been a better idea to assassinate him earlier?

In his brilliant recent study of Hitler, Joachim Fest makes it clear that the Nazi vision in its most apocalyptic racial form was peculiarly Hitlerian. He was the fanatic among the fanatics. Would it have been immoral for British intelligence to have got rid of him in 1939, before he killed millions of people and wrecked Europe, perhaps fatally?

Other cases may not be quite so clear-cut. At the time of the supposed CIA attempt to kill him, Sukarno was obviously paving the way for a Communist coup in Indonesia. Through good luck, the coup failed by an eyelash, and in the anti-Communist backlash tens of thousands of people were slaughtered. Sukarno's policies were leading directly to disaster in one form or another. Is it obvious that we should be glad the assassination attempt failed?

We can take it for granted, I believe, that if an American President did condone an assassination attempt he did so only after grave consideration of the moral and political factors involved. He would be assuming a very serious responsibility — but that, after all, is what he is there for.

Energy policy not that easy

President Ford is making solid political capital out of Congress' failure to come up with an acceptable, affirmative energy policy with which to meet the threat of even higher imported oil prices and the possibility of another Arab oil boycott.

Unfortunately, it isn't all that easy. Thinking on the energy problem is divided into two philosophies, and bringing the two together is what's causing the problem.

One point of view has it that the only way to meet the oil price threat is to curtail heavy oil use by pricing it so high as to discourage consumption — ironically enough, just what the oil cartel proposes to do. In that case, legislation is not needed, since the cartel will be most happy to take care of that detail on its own.

The other philosophy is that excessive consumption should be discouraged not by negative but by positive means. Instead of higher taxes, which critics point out would be most unfair to those unable to afford it, a system of incentives would be payable to those doing the most to find alternatives to oil for heat and electricity and who drive fuel-stingy automobiles.

Despite the threats of imminent oil price hikes, we feel it's a mistake to think we can legislate energy independence on a moment's notice. We have spent years getting into habits and building a society that depends on heavy energy use. Such moves — and the moribund Project Independence — are little more than a grasping for the good old days when we lived high off the energy hog.

If anything is going to alter our lifestyle so that it uses less energy it is going to be higher prices. We agree that there's some chauvinistic satisfaction in raising the price ourselves before some foreigner does it for us, but that is unrealistic and adolescent. We prefer a limited system of incentives to change our profligate ways and the operation of the marketplace to provide us with all the negative incentive we can use.

Raising taxes on oil fuels and then returning the bounty to consumers in other ways is not even robbing Peter to pay Paul. It's robbing Peter and then reimbursing him for his loss. It has the appeal of forceful, direct and immediate action, but little else to recommend it. In other words, it's the perfect political solution, but is worthless economically.

Divorces easy to get; rate keeps spiraling in America

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — It's easy to get a divorce, and Americans are getting them in record numbers.

But in this one-time "Divorce Capital of the World" where such names as Roosevelt, Vanderbilt and Rockefeller once made divorce court headlines, the number of divorces declined last year.

A United Press International survey indicated the reason may be divorces are easier to get in other states, many of which have adopted "no fault" or dissolution-of-marriage laws.

The survey showed state after state with spiraling divorce rates over the last few years. Attorneys, judges and educators offered many reasons.

"People simply are not prepared for marriage," said Walt Johnson, who teaches a divorce class at Sangamon State University, Springfield, Ill. "We bring up kids to believe marriage is the thing to do but we don't tell them what to do inside it."

He wants marriage education classes in elementary and high schools, coupled with efforts by court agencies to try to save a marriage. But he agrees with many others that, once a marriage is on the rocks, "let them break up amicably rather than lying in court or fighting over the property."

Although many divorces involve persons in their teens or early 20s who may have been too immature for a marital relationship, many involve those who have been married 20 or 25 years. Frequently, the wife initiates the proceeding.

Norma Briggs, executive secretary of the Wisconsin

Governor's Commission on the Status of Women, said 41 per cent of divorces granted in the state are to couples who have been married more than 10 years.

But in South Dakota, most of the increase involved couples married less than five years.

The divorce rate last year climbed about 5 per cent in most states. In New York, the increase was 16 per cent.

State Sen. Roy Goodman of Manhattan, who helped liberalize the divorce code, said this has "absolutely not" led to the increasing number of divorces.

"People can get married, literally at the snap of a finger, but our divorce laws have been unthinkably onerous," he said.

In Tulsa, Okla., the rate is about 10 per cent. Special District Judge Ed Glass said he doesn't know why, but believes "people just get tired of each other for one reason or another," possibly for economic reasons.

"Let's face it, a family with three kids with daddy making $3 an hour is a life sentence. Being stuck must be a horrible feeling, and perhaps divorce is the way they see to get away."

Many persons interviewed by UPI said the potential for broken marriages always has been high, but husbands and wives often stayed together out of sheer economic need. Now, women are becoming financially independent and decide to try to make a new life on their own merits.

Women's Lib may have something to do with it, but in Idaho, marriage counselor George Moussetis said, "Liberated women have been liberated from the day they were born."

William Paris, a church pastor and Washington State legislator, said most people look at love as an emotion and overlook attendant responsibilities. He said more attention should be paid to family life.

Even pigeons don't mess with Henry Kissinger

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Henry Kissinger had a problem Monday.

The secretary of state, standing on the covered White House porch outside President Ford's office, glanced up at the pigeon perched above his head and then out into the Rose Garden where the rain fell.

He frowned and decided to take his chance with the pigeon.

Moments earlier, Kissinger had been smiling. He had one of the few good positions to witness the Rose Garden ceremony in which President Walter Scheel of West Germany and President Ford honored John J. McCloy for his services to U.S.-German relations in the post-World War II era.

Scheel stood in front of the microphone and the rain came splattering down on his balding head midway through his speech. Ford stood on the porch steps and could only smile and not move — protocol would never permit it — when the rains came.

Kissinger grinned at those out in the rain. Then the pigeon flew in to shelter under the porch ceiling, directly above Kissinger's head.

It announced its coming by going, "coo-coo." Five times it broke into Scheel's speech to "coo-coo."

Each time Kissinger glanced up. Would it be better to be rained upon than to suffer what the pigeon might do above his head?

Kissinger toughed it out.

McCloy had now taken the microphone and was quoting "my great hero-statesman, Henry Stimson." He cited the words of the late secretary of war in the need for one to push on, to persevere. "The only deadly thing he knew was cynicism," McCloy said.

Up on the porch Kissinger glanced up at the pigeon. And then set his chin and became a model of perseverance.

It paid off.

The pigeon flew off and the ceremony ended with nothing dropping on Kissinger.

Laotians to grill American

VIENTIANE (UPI) — Police sources said Monday that an American woman school teacher held here by Communist-controlled police since June 5 has been transferred to another location to undergo formal interrogation.

No charges have been filed against Rosemary Ann Conway, 35, of Chicago and San Jose, Calif.

The sources said Miss Conway was taken from the headquarters during the weekend and is now being held at the offices of the former Center for National Documentation.

Although the joint police—now under control of the Communists—have not brought any charges, the Pathet Lao radio and news agency have accused Miss Conway of working for the Central Intelligence Agency in an attempt to smuggle out of the country aircraft provided by U.S. military aid to the neutralist government of Prime Minister Souvanna Phouma.

The documentation center formerly carried on investigations of political infractions but was ordered disbanded following last month's de facto takeover of power by the Communist Pathet Lao.

U.S. embassy officials said they were not aware of the move and requested permission Monday to visit Miss Conway, who has been held for the past 11 days despite Laotian laws forbidding the detention of prisoners for more than 24 hours without formal charges. No immediate reply was made to the request.

In other developments, ministers named last week to succeed rightist members of the coalition government who fled into exile or were ousted last month were sworn in.

Crash courses in survival

Refugees go to school

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. (UPI) — Whole families of Vietnamese refugees showed up for class Monday in a crash program by the state of Florida to teach them everything from survival English to how to call a cop.

"We have no problem motivating them. They are anxious to learn," said James Rhodes, who is heading up the program for Okaloosa-Walton Junior College.

To prepare them to go to new homes in all areas of the country, the Vietnamese are being taught, in addition to basic English, how to manage American money; that cars drive on the right side and pedestrians walk on the left side of the road; how to go to the health department if they get sick; how to find a policeman; and how to cope in the supermarket.

"Some of them are farmers and must be taught about sanitation," Rhodes said.

One problem was persuading parents to let the kids attend classes separately, "but if the head of the household says 'no,' we don't insist," Rhodes said.

Students range from toddlers to grandmothers, and from illiterates to Ph.D.s. "Fortunately, most have been exposed to English," Rhodes said. "Many can read and write it fluently but can't speak it."

Picture tests developed in Miami during the influx of Cuban refugees over a decade ago are being used to determine the language level of each student and the language course was developed by the Defense Department to teach Vietnamese pilots in the United States how to fly during the Vietnam war.

Florida is receiving $203,425 from the U.S. Office of Education to underwrite costs of a paid staff of one coordinator, 10 lead teachers and a secretary, but most of the teaching is being done by volunteers.

The volunteers, many of them certified teachers on vacation, are using rudimentary English texts, picture cutouts, flash cards, objects and tapes for audio practice.

"Not a word of Vietnamese is allowed in the classroom," Rhodes said. "If we get in a bind, an interpreter helps us out."

Each student gets 12 hours of instruction over a two-week period in classes of 36 held in tents that have been wired for electricity so that big fans help keep the hot air of a Florida summer moving.

"Luckily, it rains nearly every day and cools things off," Rhodes said. The classes run in two six-hour shifts a day, six days a week.

He anticipates a steady student body of about 4,500, although it won't always be the same persons as the processing time for relocation has been pushed up to two weeks.

Observers from refugee camps as far off as California are watching the program develop.

Riot over grievances

Female cons battle guards

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Women inmates armed with chunks of concrete and hoe handles fought a pitched battle with nightstick-swinging guards Monday at North Carolina Women's Prison. Eleven inmates and six guards were injured.

The guards retreated outside the chain-link fence surrounding the institution and the women resumed their night-long sit-down demonstration for five more hours before ending the protest.

When prison officials promised about 11 a.m. to close the prison laundry and to respond to two of the five other grievances by Thursday, the women abandoned their vigil and agreed to return to their dormitories. But they refused to go back to work until after a meeting Thursday.

Violence broke out shortly before 6 a.m. when about 35 helmeted guards herded the women inside a gymnasium-auditorium in an effort to end the demonstration, which began with singing and chanting Sunday night.

The women claimed the guards started beating them with nightsticks as soon as they had been carried, one by one, into the building, and the doors had been locked.

"They started pushing us in there. They started hitting us. We just got mad, man. We just got mad. We sent them running out of there," said Susan Blackwell, one of the inmates.

Grabbing volleyball net poles with concrete bases to use as battering rams, the women knocked down the doors, then smashed the concrete and hurled chunks at the retreating guards.

Some of the inmates picked up rakes, hoes and baseball bats, flailing at the guards and prison officials who were inside the eight-foot high cyclone fence. Walker Kautzky, a deputy director of prisons who less than an hour before had ordered the women into the gymnasium, was struck on the head with a baseball bat, but was not seriously hurt.

Correction officials said all 11 of the injured inmates were taken to Wake Memorial Hospital, but were later released, although three of them remained in the dispensary at the prison. All were in satisfactory condition.

Most of the guards suffered minor cuts and scratches. One guard, H.W. Edward, however, was treated for more serious bruises at Wake Memorial and released.

Book fair to fund grants

AAUW awards four scholarships

STROUDSBURG — The American Association of University Women (AAUW), Stroudsburg branch, has announced the four winners of its annual scholarship awards.

Recipients of the $250 awards are Pam Keller, Stroudsburg High School, Sheila Smith, Pleasant Valley High School, Barbara Danfelt, East Stroudsburg High School, and Renee Brosius, Pocono Mountain High School.

Scholarship winners are selected by committees at each of the four public high schools in Monroe County. Recipients must be in the top fifth of the class, have been accepted at a college offering a bachelor's degree program and show need for the award.

Money for the scholarships is earned at the AAUW book fair, to be held this year from June 30 to July 5 in the Keystone Room at A. B. Wyckoff's, Stroudsburg.

Miss Keller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Keller, 313 Wallace St., Stroudsburg, was vice president of her senior class. She has been a member of marching, concert and pep bands. Co-editor of the yearbook, she was a member of the National Honor Society and a recipient of the DAR Citizenship Award. She will attend the University of Pittsburgh.

Miss Smith is the daughter of Mrs. Marion Smith, Star Route, Gilbert. She has participated in several sports, including softball and basketball for three years. She was a member of the band and senior chorus and the National Honor Society. She will attend Ursinus College.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Danfelt, 97 Ridgeway St., East Stroudsburg, Miss Danfelt has participated in concert and marching bands at East Stroudsburg, district and regional band, district orchestra and all-state band. Valedictorian of her class, she has received the Tom Waring Trust Fund Award and the John Philip Sousa band award. She will matriculate at West Chester State College.

Miss Brosius is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Brosius, Swiftwater. She has been a member of the field hockey team for four years and participated in intramural track. Listed in "Who's Who Among American High School Students," she won the vocational merit award from the Kiwanis Club. She will attend Lycoming College.

Special focuses on health service

HAVERFORD — The life-saving capability — an incapability — of emergency medical service in Pennsylvania is examined on "A Stitch in Time," a three-part special to be broadcast by the seven member stations of the Pennsylvania Public Television Network (PPTN), Thursday, at 7:30 p.m. Locally, the program can be seen on Channel 39 or 12 on cable television.

The program is designed to increase public awareness of typical and ideal emergency care delivery and what, if anything, is being done in Pennsylvania to ensure the latter.

"Emergency Tales of Mother Goose," the first segment of the special, is a family-oriented half-hour program in which storybook characters illustrate the importance of knowing what to do when faced with one of life's emergency situations. The segment emphasizes the important role of the first person at the scene of any accident and life support procedures which even children can and should learn.

Kevin Tighe, paramedic Roy De Soto on NBC's "Emergency!" series, hosts "A Stitch in Time," the second segment of the special. The one-hour program dramatizes a typical emergency situation, an automobile accident which results in multiple injuries. The viewer is confronted with questions concerning the role of legislation in upgrading emergency care, the type of training currently required of our emergency care personnel, and the importance of citizen action in improving the system.

"A Stitch in Time Follow-Up," the final component of the special is a live round table discussion on the status of emergency care in Pennsylvania and what attempts are being made to improve it. Included are spokesmen for the medical field, the private citizen, the State of Pennsylvania, volunteer groups, fire and ambulance personnel, police organizations, emergency room nurses and hospitals.

"A Stitch in Time" is produced for PPTN by WITF-Hershey. WLVZ-Allentown-Bethlehem-Easton will carry the program locally, and will add the additional feature of a panel composed of Lehigh Valley Area Emergency Medical Service people from 9:30 to 10:00 p.m.

Home food preservation

Raw food is packed into jars and hot liquid added to the jar. The lids are put on and jars are processed.

Recommended processing methods — There are two methods of processing and all foods being canned should be processed by the method recommended for a specific food.

Boiling water bath is the processing method recommended for all fruits, tomatoes, pickles, pickled beets and jellies to be sealed with two-piece metal lids. Equipment needed is a boiling water bath canner. The canner has a rack in the bottom and a lid and is deep enough that rapidly boiling water will be at least one inch, but preferably two inches, above the tops of the jars. Most canners will accommodate both pint and quart jars.

The boiling water bath canner should be no more than two inches larger in diameter than the burner on which it will be used. Fitting the boiling water bath canner to the size of the burner is important so proper heat treatment is possible for all jars in the canner. Do not use a wash boiler that fits over two burners as some jars will not get enough heat for proper processing.

Pressure canner processing is the only recommended method of processing low-acid foods including all meats and vegetables except tomatoes and pickled beets. The pressure canner must have a rack in the bottom, a tight-fitting cover, petcock or exhaust port, safety valve and an accurate weight or dial pressure gauge. If your pressure canner has a dial gauge and you would like it checked for accuracy, call the Extension Office (421-6430). We'll do it for you free of charge.

Self-sealing lids that come in two pieces and are made of metal are the only ones recommended for home canning. They consist of a flat metal lid with sealing compound under

Newlyweds flout tradition in furnishing first home

NEW YORK (UPI) — Shower the liberated bride. When she and husband furnish their first home, they're not locked in to parental taste.

"It no longer is a bride saying, 'Mother had French furniture, so I'll have French'," said Abbey Darer, a freelance designer and former magazine decorating editor.

"Young people are far more venturesome these days," said Mrs. Darer, a pretty red-haired woman in her 30s. "Their lifestyle is drastically different from what their parents' was."

"It's archaic to think that they'll do a home because that is the way the parents did it. They're willing to pin Indian bedspreads on the wall, lacquer a trunk, and they're not worried about status."

"They shop and decorate together. You'll see them combing the lumberyards on Saturdays."

"I don't know that women's lib has had anything to do with it, but the attitude I see is that furnishing the new home is not just her job but his and hers."

"The furniture industry is aware of this trend. There's an awful lot of fresh, bright furnishings, casual and low-priced, designed for them."

"Budgeting is important for most couples, who look on the first investment as 'fun'. A lot of what goes into the living room now eventually will end up in other parts of the house, probably the family room if children come along. The second-step investments will be far more formulated."

I asked Mrs. Darer, widow of Norman Darer who was with CBS Publications, to outline a budget plan for furnishing the first nest with necessities.

She did it on a basic budget of $2,000, guided by Modern Bride magazine's 1973 (the latest) survey on furniture acquisition in the first-marriage market. The survey showed 28.8 per cent of couples spend $1,001 to $2,000 yearly in the early years.

The next highest percentage was 22.3 per cent, spending $501 to $1,000. Only 4.9 per cent spent over $3,000.

Mrs. Darer sketched a living room which had paint-them-yourself storage cases beneath a window area. The window had an inexpensive bamboo roll shade.

Tops of the storage cases provided space for a television set and stereo equipment — "the mainstays, along with books, of any young couple's home today."

Seating is an L-shaped banquette, starting with rectangular wooden bases the couple can make themselves and finishing in any color they elect.

Fitted neatly on top to make "sofas" were two twin-sized mattresses covered with brightly patterned sheets turned into upholstery and piled high and deep with pillows in assorted shades also covered with sheets.

"Sheets," she said, "provide color and practicality. They're washable and I find them one of the cheapest ways of decorating."

A center coffee table in glass and chrome adapted to another trend — that of informal dining in the living area, either the couple alone or when they entertain.

A wall-to-wall carpet in a bright shade (she liked geranium) was a shag from Magee (she does decorating and promotion for Magee Carpets among others in the home furnishings field).

Mrs. Darer totaled the cost, including lamps and some accessories, at just over $1,000.

Couples to learn of 'encounters'

EAST STROUDSBURG — Marriage encounters, recently the subject of articles in national magazines, will be one of the features at an Ecumenical Workshop to be held Saturday at Notre Dame High School, East Stroudsburg.

A couple who has made a marriage encounter will provide an information session for other interested couples beginning at 9:45 a.m. at the school.

A marriage encounter is a special program which has been developing across the country since 1968. The emphasis in the encounter is on private dialogue between husband and wife.

The encounter itself is a retreat of sorts. Couples spend a weekend alone and with other couples in a program which teaches a technique of communication.

Couples are asked to look deeply into their relationships. The purpose of the encounter is "to make a good marriage great," according to one who has made the encounter.

Interested couples of all faiths are asked to attend the information session together. Further information can be obtained from George and Deborah Fritz at 588-9124.

Mr. and Mrs. Fritz will present the information hour.

STATE COLLEGE — Nine Monroe 4-H members will learn specialized leadership skills and take a look at current teenage concerns when they take part in Pennsylvania 4-H Leadership Congress June 23-26 on The Pennsylvania State University's main campus.

Members participating in 4-H Congress are: Jane Rowlands, Ruth Rowlands, Tina Pyscher, Kevin Rowlands, Deirdre Kirschner, Steve Deibler, Joseph Rennekamp, and Mike Meyers, all of Stroudsburg.

Another county 4-H member, Jerry Rennekamp, of R.D. 2, Stroudsburg has been named to serve as a Leadership Council representative. Jerry, who attended last year's Congress, will supervise program activities along with 59 other state members.

Leadership Council delegates will arrive on the Penn State campus June 20 for two days of counseling and orientation to prepare them for their duties the remainder of the week.

Nurses model historic fashion

BANGOR — The nurses from Stroud Manor will present an historic fashion show at 7:30 p.m. tonight at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Chaffier, Bangor, as a bicentennial and Bangor centennial project. Fashions of 100 years ago will be modeled.

Luncheon set

EAST STROUDSBURG — The Monroe County Garden Club will hold its salad bowl luncheon at noon Thursday in the East Stroudsburg United Presbyterian Church.

Guests are invited; a donation of 75 cents for each guest will be asked. Further information can be obtained from Mrs. Robert W. Marley, 421-5433.

Mock marriages novel try at educating teens on life

By JOAN LIBMAN
Dow Jones-Ottaway News

PORTLAND, Ore. — A 17-year-old couple wearing jeans walk past the crystal chandeliers and plastic flowers in the lobby of Batman's Chapel of Dawn Mortuary and into the business office, where they ask how much it will cost to bury their five-year-old son.

A mortician dressed in a dark, pin-striped suit starts the paper work. The teen-age couple answer his question about limousine service, flowers and a soloist.

Then the mortician asks the deceased child's date of birth and middle name. The husband fidgets with a ball-point pen. The wife nervously twirls a strand of long, blonde hair.

Neither can answer the last question.

No wonder, considering that Gail Richey and Forrest Gooding aren't really parents, — and aren't even legally married. They were "married" in a mock ceremony in a class in contemporary family living at Parkrose Senior High School here.

As part of an assignment, they have taken a turn spinning the "wheel of misfortune," which in their case landed on "death in the family." (Other class members had to deal with homes destroyed by fire, a six-month prison term, birth of triplets or a mother-in-law's moving in.)

Classes in sex education, parenthood and family living aren't new, of course. But the U.S. Office of Education says the Parkrose program goes dramatically further than most.

It begins by pairing off the males and females in class as couples; then the partners in each couple are stuck with each other through a trimester that emphasizes the hard economic realities of married life.

During the term, spouses must "rent" an apartment, prepare a budget, buy insurance, calculate the cost of having a baby, buy a home and file income-tax returns. And if those economic realities aren't hard enough, each "marriage" ends with a final trauma: divorce and dividing the property.

"In 16 years of education, this is by far the most rewarding thing I've ever done," says Cliff Allen, the school's hefty former football coach, who heads the social-studies department. He conceived the idea for the class in the early 1960s. Five years ago, he decided to put together a course stressing finances.

"I realized that for 12 years, the system protects the kids. Then we throw them out into our economy, and they can't handle the problems," he says.

Some lessons are fun. To the amusement of the class, Anne Graham, a sophomore, with her "husband," Dave Langley, planned a first-year budget that lacked such basics as water, electricity and furniture.

Without exception, students are surprised to realize how much things cost. Rochelle Dehaan is a petite, brown-eyed 17-year-old with a steady boyfriend. She had been thinking about getting married at 19 and starting on a family that would grow to eight children.

"Then I realized that with $12,000 a year and one child, we had only $10 left every month," she says. Rochelle and her "husband" also got into squabbles over money. "I'm really spoiled. I have 13 pairs of shoes in my closet at home. But we'd go shopping and he'd say, 'no shoes.' He also said I didn't need a broom, that I could clean the kitchen with a vacuum," she says.

These days, Rochelle thinks she will wait to marry until she is "at least 23 and finished with college." She now has cut the number of children she wants to have to three "because it's so expensive."

Allen finds such comments heartening. Currently, he is trying to get a federal grant to package the course and distribute it to teachers elsewhere.

"We need experts in various fields to look at what we've done and make sure it's sound, then we can distribute it. These are good kids, and we aren't giving them what they need to survive," he says.

Allen also is dreaming up another course. That one, he says, will be entitled "Life." It will start with birth and end, of course, with death.

Ann Landers

Tidy sister

Dear Ann Landers: I have a problem. It's my sister. Every time Hilda comes over she takes it upon herself to clean the house. Hilda isn't in the place five minutes before she asked for a cloth to get at "those fingerprints on the wall." Then she grabs the kitchen ladder and drags it around the house — carrying a broom with a towel wrapped around it so she can "wipe the webs out of the corners of the ceiling."

When Hilda has dinner with us she examines each piece of silverware. More than once, she has taken a fork or a spoon to the sink and washed it before using it. This really burns me up.

How does one deal with such a person who means well but gets on my nerves? —

Please let the woman know that the best place to go is to her state's employment service. That agency not only advises clients on jobs, but will counsel them, offer vocational testing and, if necessary, refer them to the appropriate place for vocational or educational training. All at no charge. And please tell "Unhappy" that they aren't interested in her past — just her future. —

Alan Kroker, Michigan Employment Security Commission

Dear Alan K: That's what I call a helping hand! I hope "Not So Happy" lives in Michigan, sees your letter and introduces herself to you soon. The gal gave me no name or address.

I miss a lot of after-school events and good times with friends because of my "duties."

Mom works a 3 to 11 p.m. shift, so I must rush home from school five days a week. On Saturday and Sunday nights she and her boyfriend go out. (Mom is divorced.)

Is this fair? —

Used Too Much

Dear Used: No, it is not fair and I hope I can help your mother understand what she is doing to you.

First, she is using you as hired help — which is a gross injustice. You should not be denied a social life. Second, if you are to be in charge of younger siblings you should have the authority to discipline them.

I suggest you enlist the help of a third party — a favorite teacher, guidance counselor, or perhaps an understanding relative. Your mother should hire an older woman to give you some relief.

Dear Ann Landers: Saturday is the day my husband is supposed to spend with his five-year-old son by a former wife.

Every Saturday he has a golf game, plays cards, or goes fishing. I am the unpaid babysitter and I resent it. The youngster is undisciplined and I am exhausted after chasing him for seven hours. Any suggestions? —

Beat

Dear Beat: Hire a sitter and get out of the house. Also tell your husband if he doesn't start spending some time with that boy soon they will have no relationship later. In fact, it may be too late now.

Kennedy biggest threat to Ford

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Backstairs at the White House: President Ford, like his predecessor Richard N. Nixon, may see as his only major political threat the possible candidacy of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., on the Democratic ticket.

There is some feeling in Washington that Kennedy may be waiting in the wings. If all falls into place and the Democrats cannot settle on a strong candidate, Kennedy could step forward, although he has declared he will not run.

During an interview with Pierre Salinger, press secretary to President John F. Kennedy and now correspondent for a French news magazine, Ford asked Salinger: "Will Kennedy run?"

Salinger said he did not think so.

During the start of the 1972 campaign, Nixon had the same concern about Kennedy opposing him on the Democratic ticket.

Despite Kennedy's protestations now, the public opinion pollsters still view him as a viable candidate for the Democratic nomination, and pit him against Ford in their samplings. The last Harris poll had Ford ahead 48 per cent to 46 per cent.

One Egyptian bodyguard opened the attache case of Time Magazine reporter Dean Fisher and plucked out a can of shaving cream. Apparently the guard had never seen an aerosol can of shaving cream. He held it close to his nose as if to smell it. Then he held it close to his eyes to examine it closely.

Color problem

OBSTACLE: (Q.) I've known Bob a long time and now we are going together and it is great, except for one thing. He is half white and half black. This does not matter to me (my great-grandmother was black), but my mother doesn't go for it.

She has grounded me until I break up with Bob. I am 14. That means I will be grounded until I am 18 — four years — because I don't plan to break up with him. I don't know if I'll be able to cope with it for four years. Please help me. —

Hurting in Pennsylvania

(A.) As your mother sees it, Bob is black and you are white. This is a big obstacle to her, but her feelings may not be all prejudiced. She wants you to avoid as much heartache as you can. It has started already, and, as you fear, it could grow worse.

Listen to your heart, and your mother's views. Also be sure Bob knows what your loyalty to him is costing. Remember, too, that you, at 14, are not ready to make lifetime decisions. If Bob is 14, neither is he.

UNINVITED: (Q.) I have a feeling my best friend has rejected me. Marcia hangs around me some now, but when Caroline is around I feel unwanted.

Tonight Marcia and Caroline are staying all night together.

Should I start asking them to stay all night with me to make them count me in? —

Feeling Unwanted and Rejected in Texas

(A.) You can't MAKE Marcia and Caroline want you. I have a feeling that if they did they would have invited you to spend the night with them. Face the fact that Marcia has found a new best friend and find some new friends of your own.

Steven Belsito DeShields, a Vietnam veteran of Greenbelt, Md., has been appealing to President Ford to be permitted to be buried in Arlington Cemetery, but so far he claims he is getting a cold shoulder to his pleas.

DeShields says his doctors have told him he is a terminal cancer case, so he wants to make his burial arrangements now.

DeShields says his maternal grandfather, Colonel Charles Burton DeShields, is buried "double depth" in Arlington cemetery and he would like to be buried on top in the same plot.

A law was passed in 1968 which prohibits a veteran, unless he is retired or on active duty, from being buried at Arlington National Cemetery.

DeShields served a year in Vietnam and was given an honorable discharge.

President Ford is expected to take a grand tour of Europe in late July, starting with the European heads of state summit in Helsinki. Afterwards, he will pick up his invitations to visit Belgrade, Bucharest, Bonn, London, perhaps Paris and another capital or two.

On the European swing two weeks ago, White House press secretary Ron Nessen said that Ford "never gets tired." But after Ford stumbled down the ramp of his airplane at Salzburg, Nessen, asked if Ford was tired, said "of course he's tired; I'm tired."

When Austrian police, wearing black leather coats and jackboots, at first barred newsmen from the courtyard of the Palace in Salzburg where Ford and Egypt's President Anwar Sadat were meeting, the reporters and photographers burst into "We Shall Overcome" — both in English and in German.

Within two minutes the Palace gates were flung open.

Egyptian security met journalistic readiness head on in Salzburg and resulted in something akin to a close shave.

Your Horoscope

Frances Drake

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — Events may place you in conflict with those in authority. Arguments will get you nowhere, however. Be discreet and amiable.

TAURUS (April 21 to May 21) — Control your imagination while you also develop its tremendous potential for furthering your advancement. Don't let random ideas lead you out of bounds.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — Other persons may play an important part in day's activities. Much will depend on your reactions. Don't split hairs in matters of minor importance.

LEO (July 24 to August 23) — Solar influences now give you a sharp, practical outlook on projects in which you are interested. Take advantage of the situation.

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — Watch your competition carefully. Indications are that some tricky maneuvers may be employed. Alert, however, you can spot them.

LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — You may be tempted to take an unexpected fling in money matters and, if your judgment is as good as it usually is, it should pay off.

SCORPIO (October 24 to November 22) — Don't force issues now. The odds are against you and you'll gain more by waiting — and studying situations. But look ahead confidently. Avoid negative thinking.

SAGITTARIUS (November

23 to December 21) — Do not be impulsive, but neither hold off action because of uncertainty over your abilities. Curb doubts and fears. You DO have ability. Back it with self-confidence.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — Be tactful in family circles, all personal contacts. Recurrences of old hassles are possible if you are not on guard.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — A good day for monetary affairs. You could now make a very sound investment — if carefully thought out beforehand. Avoid speculation, however.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20) — Wait patiently for the results of your efforts. Reward WILL come — perhaps greater than you anticipate. Some new interests in the offing.

YOU BORN TODAY have the mind, and usually the inclination, for intellectual pursuits. You also have a great love of beauty but, unlike many other Gemini's, may prefer a business career to an artistic one. If so, you could best succeed at banking, manufacturing or commerce. Those of this date are also scientifically inclined and could especially excel in chemistry, physics or medicine. A natural fact-finder, you could also shine in the field of research and would make an outstanding detective. Traits to curb: introspectiveness, hypersensitivity, extravagance.

and shifted to a low diamond. East took the ace and returned a heart, which declarer ruffed. South played a club to the king, discarded a club on the queen of diamonds, ruffed a diamond, then played a club to the ace and ruffed a heart. As a result of these maneuvers — all based on the assumption that West had the five missing trumps — this was now the position:

There are many occasions in life when the best course of conduct is to keep quiet — and some of these occasions undoubtedly arise at the bridge table during the bidding.

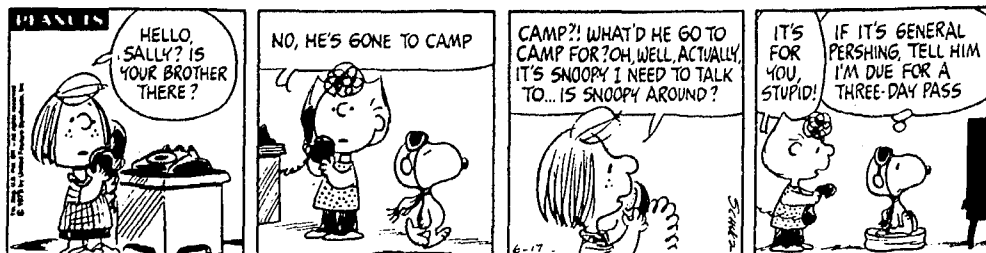

Consider this deal where South got to four spades, which West somewhat recklessly doubled. North redoubled and South, armed with the knowledge that West probably had all the missing trump proceeded to wrap the contract around West's neck.

Declarer led the queen of clubs and there was no way West could score more than one trump trick. Actually he ruffed with the jack, over-ruffed with the ace. A heart return, trumped with the king and followed by the ten of clubs, rendered West helpless.

Whatever he did, whether he ruffed high or low, South was bound to make two more trump tricks and the contract. West should have kept his big mouth shut! He would almost surely have scored a plus of 100 — instead of going minus 1,230 — had he maintained a discreet silence.

Cause of weight gain

Can a glandular disturbance be responsible for the fact that I have gained an enormous amount of weight in the past eight months?

Miss D.F.O., Ga.

Dear Miss O.:

It is possible for a decreased activity of the thyroid gland to be responsible for a marked weight gain.

But far too often, a sluggish gland is the easy self-diagnosis made by people who are eating too much, drinking too much and doing little or no exercise.

It is astonishing how many of us increase our caloric intake without acknowledging a change in our eating habits.

If you will check back you will probably find that you have increased your caloric intake in some way during the past eight months. It must be remembered that people who have gained weight have much more fat to feed. The cycle is endless and unless broken, the gain in weight increases.

The possibility of a hyperactive thyroid can be determined by simple tests. If inactivity of the thyroid gland is responsible, the condition can be remedied.

I hear that smallpox vaccination is no longer necessary for travelers. Is this true?

Mr. J.S., Mich.

Dear Mr. S.:

Because smallpox has virtually been eliminated in the United States, proof of revaccination is no longer required by health officials for re-entry into the United States.

However, there are some countries which insist on evidence of vaccination. Travelers should check with their local health officials because these rules are constantly being modified.

Early farm life is the theme of Quiet Valley's living museum opening for the summer.

Summer season ahead

Quiet Valley Farm plans opening

STROUDSBURG — Quiet Valley Living Historical Farm opens Friday for the summer season.

Although the farm operates year-round, it is only during the summer that tours are given for the general public.

Quiet Valley Farm has just completed over a month of tours for children from New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania, accommodating some 300 students throughout the spring.

During the summer season, June 20 through Labor Day, guided tours by young people dressed in traditional Pennsylvania Dutch garb will give visitors a glimpse of the way of life of early settlers in the Monroe County area.

Demonstrations will be provided in early handicrafts, methods of preparing and preserving foods, spinning, weaving and farming methods that will make the period seem real and easier to understand.

While many examples of early farm implements and other labor-saving items are on display, the emphasis at Quiet Valley Farm is on the way the ordinary family of the time worked and lived.

Hours for the farm will be 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. daily except Sundays which will be 1 to 5:30 p.m.

Ecology job slots to open with state

HARRISBURG — The State Civil Service Commission (SCSC) has revised and reissued the examination announcement for five levels of environmental protection specialists, including administrative levels.

Starting salaries range from $11,110 to $18,602 yearly. Richard A. Rosenberry, SCSC executive director, said applications for statewide tests will be accepted until further notice. Examinations will be scheduled as soon as possible after applications are received, and candidates will receive notice of the time and place to report for the test.

The examinations will also be given daily at commission offices in Harrisburg, Pittsburgh, and Philadelphia. Applicants for daily tests must make arrangements with the appropriate office.

Applicants for environmental protection specialist II-VI must have a bachelor's degree in a biological or physical science, chemistry or a field closely related to environmental protection.

In addition, they must have had one to six years of environmental protection experience. Half of this experience must have been in one of several specialties: industrial hygiene, air pollution control, sanitation, or water pollution control. A written test is not required for administrative environmental protection specialists.

Applications, examination announcements and further information may be obtained from State Civil Service Commission Offices in Harrisburg, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, or from local offices.

Cap toss wounds graduate

STROUDSBURG — Stroudsburg High School's unofficial tradition of cap throwing at graduation ceremonies resulted in a near tragedy during Friday's commencement.

A 17-year-old graduating senior, Patricia Nelson, was struck above the right eye by one of the flying mortar boards. She was treated and released from the General Hospital of Monroe County after doctors took five stitches to close the bloody wound.

School Assistant Superintendent Dr. John Kupiec said the incident was regrettable and that seniors had been warned not to throw their caps into the air after being pronounced graduates.

"I'm sorry it happened," said Kupiec, who noted the incident should serve as an example to future graduating classes not to throw their caps into the air.

Shoplifter jailed for one day

STROUDSBURG — A 19-year-old Kunkletown man was sentenced to one day in the Monroe County Jail Sunday and ordered to make restitution after he was caught trying to shoplift a $1.69 package of luncheon meats from a Stroudsburg market.

David Gleenzweig was apprehended by store personnel at 12:25 p.m. Sunday when he tried to leave the IGA market with the food, Stroudsburg borough police reported. He was taken in front of District Magistrate Earl Ammerman who sentenced him to the day in jail and ordered restitution made within seven days.

Free parks require volunteers

Workers needed to create play

STROUDSBURG — Volunteer workers and surplus materials are needed to help construct playgrounds in three parks in Monroe County.

The first "park-raising" has been set for 10 a.m. June 21 at High Acres Park in Barrett Township, according to Jeffrey Evans, executive director of the Monroe County Recreation and Park Commission.

The First Ward Park in Stroudsburg will be the site of the second "playground for free" with work scheduled to begin at 9:30 a.m. June 28.

Sunday, June 29 at 9:30 a.m., a playground will be built at Schull Park in Delaware Water Gap.

More than 160 "playgrounds for free" — put together by people from "junk" and surplus materials — have been built throughout Pennsylvania since 1971.

The stimulus for the program has come from Playgrounds Clearinghouse, Inc., a non-profit corporation under contract with the state Department of Community Affairs.

This organization has shown a movie of the concept in Monroe County and has solicited interest from these three communities.

Evans urged anyone with equipment or supplies to donate to contact him at 421-2871 or Mrs. Jean Price or Ed Bevan in Barrett Township or Robert Sweeney in Delaware Water Gap. Donated materials are tax deductible.

Example of materials needed are telephone poles and cross arms, strong cable reels, sheet steel, steel pipe, 50 gallon drums, reinforced rod, conveyor belts, concrete and concrete pipe, cargo nets, plastic hose and fittings, tires — all sizes, rope, lumber, packing crates, paint.

Children and adults of all ages are encouraged to attend and join in the fun, Evans said.

Smithfield zone vote contested

STROUDSBURG — Claiming the Smithfield Township Zoning Hearing Board failed to hold a public hearing, several township residents Monday filed an appeal with Monroe County Court to have an expansion permit for Ray Hartmann and Sons revoked.

The zoning hearing board admits no public hearing on the expansion of a non-conforming use permit was held and said none is required under the terms of the zoning ordinance.

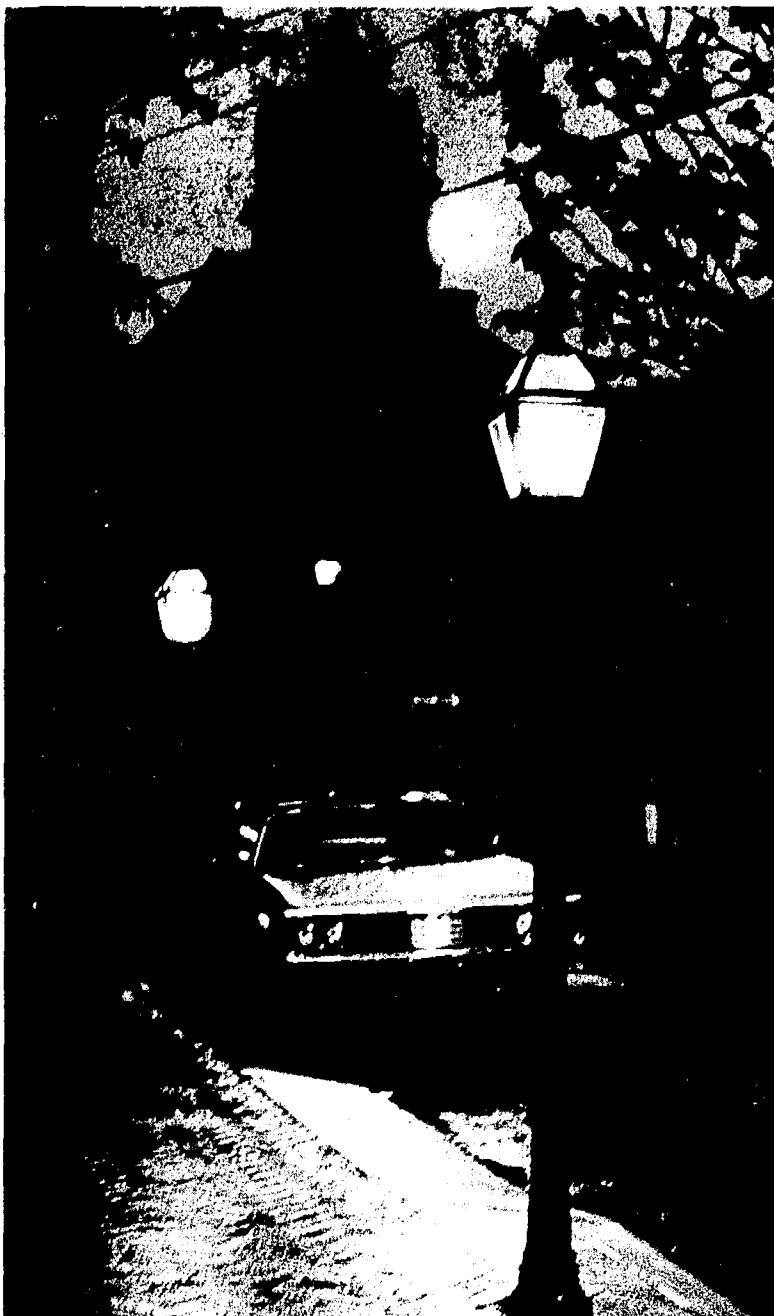

The 21 residents appealing the April 23 decision, which allows Hartmann to construct a garage-type facility for routine maintenance of heavy equipment and other vehicles at Rte. 209 and L.R. 45011, state they were not afforded an opportunity to appear at a public hearing on the expansion request.

"The action of the Zoning Hearing Board of Smithfield Township in granting the request for an expansion of a non-conforming use by Ray Hartmann and Sons without first holding a public hearing with proper notice was arbitrary, capricious and an abuse of discretion and contrary to the law."

The appeal requests that the court set aside the zoning board's action and direct that a public hearing be conducted.

Bernard M. Billick, solicitor for the zoning board, said he advised the board that no public hearing was necessary on the non-conforming use expansion request.

He said that under the zoning ordinance, a business has the right to expand up to one-third of its existing operation. A request to expand must be made to the zoning hearing board, he said, but a public hearing is not required.

Effort begins with one family

Area churches help to relocate Vietnamese

By BRUCE POSTEN
Pocono Record Reporter
BRODHEADSVILLE — Four Lutheran churches in Monroe County are sponsoring efforts to relocate Vietnamese families in the Pocono area.

The churches are participating in a national program being conducted by the Lutheran Immigration and Refugee Service to find homes and jobs for 2,000 Vietnamese families. Three congregations in the West End, Zion United Church Lutheran, Salem St. Paul, and Christ Hamilton Square Church, have banded together to relocate a Vietnamese family, according to Rev. David Ritterpusch of the Hamilton Square Church.

"We will help as many families as there are jobs and adequate housing available, but right now we are working to locate one family," he said.

Ritterpusch said the churches have "a commitment for one job," but are still looking for housing.

Rev. Paul Xander of the Zion United Church Lutheran said the congregations hope to have the families set-up by the end of the summer or early fall.

"It's been hard trying to find housing. It's not because the family is Vietnamese, though, it's just because the housing situation is horrible," he said.

St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Craigs Meadow has also decided to sponsor two Vietnamese families, according to Rev. Edward Smith.

Although the plans are still tentative, the church hopes to put a Vietnamese family of four in the restaurant business in a location along Rte. 209, Smith said.

The Craigs Meadow church will also sponsor a second family if suitable housing can be found to go along with a job offer at the General Hospital of Monroe County.

Rev. George Zacharda, director of family life services with the Lutheran Refugee Service for Northeastern Pennsylvania, said dossiers of families are sent to individual congregations after the Lutheran Refugee Service is assured homes and jobs can be provided.

"We are hoping 2,000 congregations nation-wide will participate in the program to relocate Cambodian and Vietnamese families," he said.

Zacharda explained that the Refugee Service is legally responsible for a relocated family for seven years, but local congregations "have the moral responsibility" to help entering families adjust to a local area.

"Congregations can pay the first month's rent, supply food, furniture, clothing and living utensils," he said.

"Hopefully, members of a congregation will take a family under its wing and help them become acclimated to an area," he added.

Smith said the Craigs Meadow Church will apply for a Vietnamese family Wednesday in the hope of getting them resettled by July.

He said the church will hold a craft show 3:30 p.m. and an auction 6 p.m. Saturday, July 5 to raise money for the refugee program.

Refugee job aid gripes counselor

STROUDSBURG — A story in The Pocono Record Saturday was upsetting to Peter Cegelka.

Cegelka is rehabilitation counselor at Burnley Workshop and he was upset to read that around 100 South Vietnamese and Cambodians are to be invited into the community by Pocono resorts with the expectation that they'll be given jobs.

"I understand that it is a popular move internationally and that something has to be done for the refugees," says Cegelka. "However, I represent the rehabilitation program at Burnley where we have about 15 people immediately available for placement in what we call 'competitive employment' — outside the workshop."

"The 15 are for the most part from local homes. We have trained them to do competitive work but we have been told by local employers that they don't need them today."

"Sometimes I think if we ran a high powered publicity campaign (which the South Asians have ready made for them) it would pay for itself. While it is true that most of our people are limited to sheltered work-

Subdivision law violated, official inspection reveals

By DEBORAH ENYEART
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — A Monroe County developer was accused of 24 violations of the county's subdivision ordinance Monday night at the Monroe County Planning and Zoning Commission meeting.

The commission received a letter from John Dennis, of Hess Associates who said he found 24 violations at Lake Valhalla Inc. and Valhalla Heights of Lake Valhalla Inc.

The commission decided to send a copy of the letter to developer Donald Egan informing him of the findings before taking any legal action.

Dennis made a field inspection at the development after residents complained to the planning commission about excessive road slopes and roads that haven't been constructed.

Dennis' inspection showed a bridge is 21 feet wide instead of 28 feet and three streets are less than 24 feet wide.

Also, his inspection showed rock in two roads and excessive road grades at seven locations. He also found culverts or ditches are needed at six areas.

The county subdivision regulations permit a maximum road grade of 16 per cent, but some of the roads Dennis checked had grades of 20 per cent.

Dennis' inspection indicated that two roads and a cul-de-sac have not been completed as indicated on subdivision plans.

He also found three areas where sight distances are less than 150 feet.

Resident Donald Bowen presented the planning commission with a petition signed by development residents at the May 19 meeting and indicated the sections of the ordinance they felt were being violated.

Bowen and other residents had attended a previous county planning meeting and a Smithfield Township supervisors' meeting with their complaints.

In other business, the planners decided protesting the proposed high intensity lighting on Interstate 80 was a dead issue after member Robert MacMillan reported on a meeting with PennDOT officials earlier this week.

MacMillan said that although he is not convinced there will not be any bad side effects from the lighting project, there isn't anything the commission can do.

He said the project is a "completed fact" and that he left the Monday meeting "feeling there isn't anything we can do."

Acting administrator Vincent Feeney said the sodium vapor lighting would be staggered along the interstate and would not be placed in a straight line along the center of the road.

He added that PennDOT officials said the lights would shine in a 60 degree angle or 55 foot radius of the center of the pole.

MacMillan said he was still concerned about spillover lighting. "They're aware of possible spillover. They know there will be spillover. There has to be," he said.

"Regardless of what our fears may be, there seems to be little we can do," he added.

MacMillan said he has contacted traffic safety specialists at several universities and traffic centers and has been told that high mass lighting is "the thing of the present."

Uncertain sewerage costs trouble municipal officials

By HARRIET LEEDS
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — Two of the six municipalities studied by the Monroe County General Authority in its Eastern Monroe County Wastewater Facilities Plan — Stroudsburg and Delaware Water Gap — don't seem to like the plan.

Council members planned to learn the effect the regional sewerage plan would have on their boroughs at special meetings Monday and to come to a consensus of opinion to present at the authority's public hearing Thursday.

Definite pro or con opinions were not reached, but the tenor of questions in both boroughs seemed to be generally negative.

The public hearing, which will be held at Stroud Hall at East Stroudsburg State College, is part of federal Environmental Protection Agency requirements.

General Authority representatives urged the councils of both boroughs to speak out on the plan — even if their reactions are negative ones — rather than to remain silent.

Both the Stroudsburg and the Delaware Water Gap Councils objected strenuously to the lack of financial data in the study.

Stroudsburg Borough Manager Ralph Bender, Jr. said, "It is mostly a matter of economics for us. We have the lowest (sewer) rate in the state, except for Buck Hill Falls which has us beat by $7."

Of the 11 alternate plans considered in the voluminous study, four eliminate Stroudsburg's already-paid-for sewer plant altogether. Five of the plans upgrade the Stroudsburg plant and two plans upgrade and expand it.

In all the plans but two, a new sewer plant is built in the Delaware Water Gap area. Two of the plans entail a Delaware Water Gap pumping station that would send sewage back to East Stroudsburg.

Stroudsburg objected to the idea of the General Authority taking over their sewer plant and operating it, as well as to the setting of sewer rates by the Authority.

George Spitz, chief sanitary engineer for Elam and Popoff, the consultants who did the study, emphasized the main purpose of having regional sewerage systems is to obtain the 75 per cent federal funding.

Several councilmen in Stroudsburg objected, saying they did not feel Stroudsburg residents should have to pay the same rates as Stroud Township residents since the borough has already built and paid for a plant and collecting system.

The study did not take into account, nor were the authority representatives able to answer the question of reimbursing Stroudsburg and East Stroudsburg for their sewer plants if the regional system takes them over.

Well digging strikes paydirt

By FLIP DeLUCA
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — When the Monroe County Commissioners approved digging of a water well at Pleasant Valley Manor, they were getting in deeper than they expected.

The commissioners contracted with Robert J. Hawk of Cresco to drill the well. Hawk estimated the well would be 300 feet deep and would cost $3,405.

However, Hawk had to drill a well 525 feet deep before he found water, the commissioners said. The extra 225 feet added $2,842.50 to his estimate, bring the total cost of the well to $6,247.50.

The commissioners said the bill could be paid with revenue sharing money but decided to table the question of payment until Thursday to review the bill.

In other matters, the commissioners received an inspection report on the county jail done by the state Bureau of Corrections.

The report recommended that inmates receive a medical examination within 48 hours after being committed. Currently, a physician visits the jail for sick inmates and emergency cases only, the report states.

The report also says the jail "has many physical deficiencies due to its age and size. The jail is being operated as well and as efficiently as possible under the existing conditions."

"All consideration should be given to a new facility, either a single or a joint facility with another county or counties."

In other matters, the commissioners learned from the Pocono Mountains Chamber of Commerce that the Erie-Lackawanna mainline track through Monroe County will be acquired by the Norfolk and Western Railway, Conrail or the Chesapeake system. "Our trackage will remain intact," Robert Wise, executive director of the chamber said in a letter to the commissioners.

The commissioners also received a recommendation from the county General Authority to attempt to have the county designated as a water facilities planning area in itself rather than be a part of the Lackawanna and Luzerne counties area.

Laurel Manor board accepts $157,050 bid

By BOBBY WESTBROOK
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — The contract for building a one-story addition to Laurel Manor was awarded Monday at the meeting of the Monroe County Home Assn. board of directors to John Wiesmeth of Stroudsburg with a low bid of $157,050 for basic construction.

Six local contractors had submitted bids for the project. The directors also voted to give the authority to the building committee to negotiate finances through the Monroe County Authority to capitalize the project.

Laurel Manor, a non-profit unit providing interim care for the aging in the county now contains 31 intermediate care beds and is a one and two-story wood frame building. The original two-story building was purchased in 1958. One-story additions were made in 1958 and 1962.

However, in a 1972 inspection of the facility by the Department of Labor and Industry, the department required the abandonment of the second floor, which contained 12 beds.

The building program was planned to replace these beds by the new one-story addition.

The addition, designed by RKR Associates, will be of frame construction and the contract calls for demolition of the second floor and renovations, of which the most extensive is the installation of sprinklers, also required by the state.

The new patient wing addition will accommodate 14 beds and one isolation bed as well as a new nurses' station, thus providing a total of 33 intermediate care beds.

Jess Pierson, chairman of the building committee, recommended that the general contractor be John Wiesmeth. Dee Rake was present to answer questions about the building itself.

In other action, Mrs. Edward Hess reported on plans for open house on Laurel Manor to be held on Thursday, June 26 from 1 to 4:30 p.m. with women of the board and wives of board members providing refreshments and the residents of Laurel Manor working on napkins and decorations.

Two men sentenced

STROUDSBURG — A Wallkill, N.Y. man was fined $1,000 Monday in Monroe County Court for possession of unstamped cigarettes.

Gary Sroul pleaded guilty to the charge in April. He had been arrested Feb. 22 on Interstate 80 in Tobyhanna Township.

In other sentencings, William Fetherman of Stroudsburg was fined $300 and was ordered to surrender his operator's license. He was found guilty by a jury earlier this month of driving while under the influence.

Rain renders highways dangerous

STROUDSBURG — The combination of a light rain and clouds settling in to reduce visibility made travel through the Poconos treacherous Monday night.

Cars and trucks slowed to an icy winter's evening pace to compensate for the low visibility and roads made slippery by rubber and oil accumulations rising to the surface when wet.

A tractor-trailer jackknifed as it exited off Interstate 80 onto Rte. 209 between East Stroudsburg and Delaware Water Gap early Monday night.

Avoiding a plunge over a steep cliff and into the Broadhead Creek, the truck driver,

J. Warren Hughes, 22, of Des Moines, Iowa, twisted the rig around, tipping out a stretch of guard rail and partially blocking the exit ramp. The trailer's contents were not damaged, as a refrigeration unit kept purring through the incident. Damage to the tractor, however, was extensive. The driver suffered cuts and was taken to the General Hospital of Monroe County. East Stroudsburg, where he was treated and released. A passenger, Harvey Pratt, 34, of New Hampshire, was uninjured.

In an unrelated accident, four Sciota teenagers suffered minor injuries Monday night when the car they were riding in skidded off of wet, slippery Rte. 209 near Brodheadsburg and ran into a tree.

State Police at Fern Ridge said the car was driven by Dudley L. Mazur, 17. The auto's occupants were Angela Deninio, 15; Toni Deninio, 16 and Dean Werkheiser, 17.

Police said Mazur had attempted to slow down on the slippery road when the accident occurred. The car was taken to the General Hospital of Monroe County by West End ambulance.

1-80 was dry, but shrouded in a heavy fog early Monday morning when an eastbound truck was rammed by a car in Tunkhannock Township.

State police at Swiftwater said Josephine Finn, 50, of Wilkes-Barre, was traveling in the low-visibility fog when she ran into the slower moving truck driven by Charles Crawford of Bloomsburg R.D. 1. Neither person was injured, police said. Total damage to the two vehicles amounted to $2,200, according to police.

Nearly $5,000 damage to two cars resulted from a collision on Wigwam Park Rd., Stroud Township Monday evening.

Stroud Township police said James M. Minuit, of West Haven, Conn., and a passenger in his late model sports car, Marjorie Banta, were treated and released.

Defending champs lead seeds for Monday's opening

Connors, Evert top Wimbledon tennis seeds

WIMBLEDON—(UPI)—The 1974 Wimbledon champions, Jimmy Connors and Chris Evert, were named top seeds Monday for the $266,000 Wimbledon Tennis Championships opening next Monday.

Connors was an undisputed choice to head the 16 male seeds, but 40-year-old Ken Rosewall of Australia, the man Connors annihilated in the 1974 finals here and in the Forest Hills final as well, was somewhat of a surprise as the second seed.

Nineteen-year-old Bjorn Borg of Sweden, fresh from his defense of his French title in the French championships, was named third, with Grand Prix Masters king Guillermo Vilas of Argentina fourth and the mercurial Ili Nastase of Romania fifth.

Veteran Arthur Ashe of

Miami, Fla., the World Championship Tennis title holder who routed Borg in the WCT Dallas final, was sixth on the list, while Stan Smith of Sea Pines, S.C., who won Wimbledon in 1972 but has fallen on sad times, was placed in No. 7.

Raul Ramirez of Mexico, who led his country's Davis Cup victory over the U.S. and Smith, was placed eighth, followed by Tom Okker of The Netherlands and John Alexander of Australia to round out the top 10.

Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., was seeded 11th; Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia, 12th; Marty Riessen of Amelia Island, Fla., 13th; Vitas Gerulaitis of Howard Beach, N.Y., 14th; Onny Parun of New Zealand, 15th and Tony Roche of Australia 16th.

John Newcombe, the three-time Wimbledon king who lost to Connors in their million dollar Las Vegas shoot-out, had to withdraw last week because of a leg injury, while Rod Laver, the Grand Slam winner of 1962 and 1969, did not enter.

Laver was a victim of Connors in the first of the Las Vegas showdowns.

The winner of the men's singles gets $23,000.

Miss Evert, who was engaged to Connors during last year's "Love Match Wimbledon" and who is now seemingly involved in an "on-again-off-again romance" with the brash Jimmy comes into the tournament after successful defenses of her Italian and French titles.

Placed second to Chris is the 18-year-old left-hander from Czechoslovakia, Martina Navratilova, who took her first set ever on clay from Miss Evert in the French championship final, but then went out quickly. Martina has said she cannot wait to meet Chris on grass, which is the crowd-pleasing Czech teenager's favorite.

Five-time champion Mrs. King, who has curtailed her competitive play this year, is seeded third, with Evonne Goolagong of Australia, the 1971 titlist, fourth, and 1970 Grand Slam winner Margaret Court of Australia fifth.

Virginia Wade, Britain's yearly hope for the crown, is placed sixth.

Sealed Proposals will be received by the Wallenpaupack Area School District, Owner, for additions to the Wallenpaupack Junior-Senior High School, located in Palmira Township, Pike County, Pa., in the Administration Office located at Star Road No. 2, Hawley, Pa. 18428, until 4:00 P.M., E.D.T. June 26, 1975, at which time proposals will be publicly opened and read aloud.

2. Separate bids will be required on a lump sum basis for each of the following segregated parts of the project:

Contract No. 7539.1 — General Construction (GC)

Contract No. 7539.2 — Heating and Air Conditioning (HAC)

Contract No. 7539.3 — Electrical Construction (EC)

3. Copies of the Contract Documents may be obtained by written request to the Architects, RKR-HESS ASSOCIATES, INC., 304 Park Avenue, Stroudsburg, Pennsylvania 18360, and they may be seen at the Office of the Association of the Lehigh Valley, Inc., and the Northeastern Builders' Exchange.

4. The Contract Documents will be made available to prime bidders only, and only upon receipt of deposit in the following amounts:

General Construction (GC) $500.00

Heating and Air Conditioning (HAC) $25.00

Electrical Construction (EC) $25.00

These deposits shall apply to each copy of the Contract Documents received by the Bidders. Bidders upon returning, in good condition, all copies of the Contract Documents received by them, within fifteen (15) days following date on which bids were received, will have the full deposit on the first two copies refunded to them. Nonbidders upon so returning copies as above will be refunded 50 percent of their deposits on the first two copies of Contract Documents, otherwise, full deposit will be forfeited.

5. Bidders' proposals must be accompanied by either a certified check, bank treasurer's check, bank cashier's check or bid bond in form provided herein with satisfactory corporate surety as proposed security in an amount equal to not less than 10 percent of the aggregate sum of the base bid proposals on General Construction (GC), Plumbing Construction (PC), Heating and Air Conditioning (HAC), and Electrical Construction (EC). Shall name as payee or obligee the Wallenpaupack Area School District, Owner.

6. Bidders' attention is directed to the labor provisions governing the performance of work on this project, which provisions require that all laborers and mechanics employed by Contractors and their sub-contractors in performance of the work shall be paid wages and other benefits at rates not less than those determined by the Secretary of Labor and Industry of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in accordance with Pennsylvania's Prevailing Wage Act No. 442.

7. No bidder may withdraw his proposal within thirty (30) days after the actual date of the opening thereof, and shall be valid for acceptance by the Owner at any time during this period.

8. The Owner reserves the right to waive any informalities with respect to any or all proposals or parts thereof.

Attack fatal to Courtney

ROCHESTER, N. Y. (UPI)—Clint Courtney spent the last moments of his life talking baseball with his minor league players.

The 48-year-old former major league catcher died of a heart attack early Monday while playing ping pong in the Colony East Motor Inn here with several members of his International League Richmond Braves.

"We were talking baseball, about some lineup changes, when he died," said player-coach Alan Gallagher. "He was in the middle of a sentence when the attack hit."

He was rushed to nearby Genesee Hospital where he was pronounced dead on arrival, an official said. An autopsy later revealed Courtney died of a heart attack.

The Braves had arrived in Rochester from Toledo Sunday night for a series with the Red Wings which began Monday night.

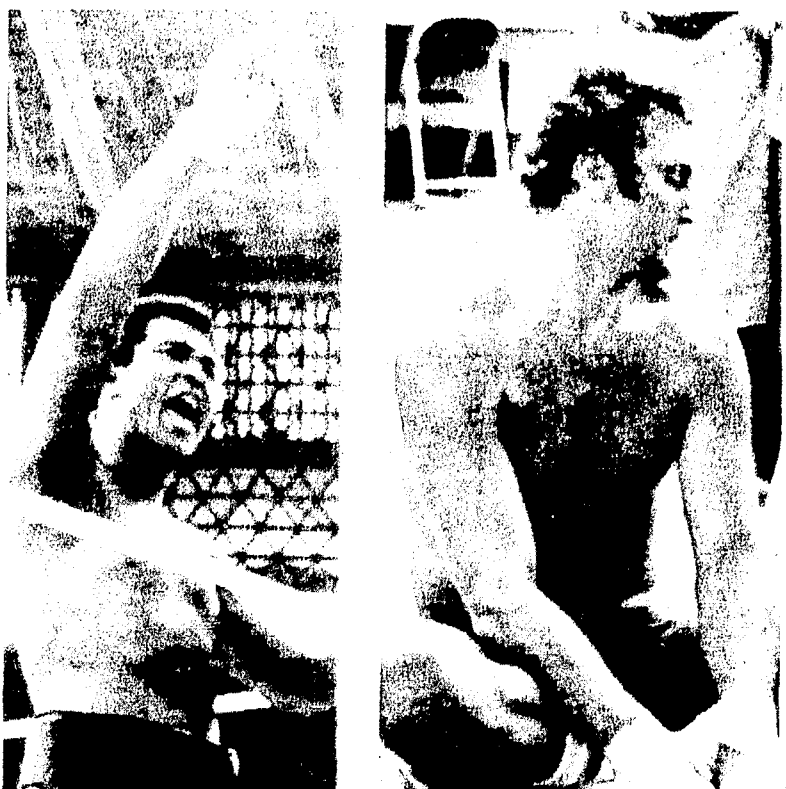

Nicknamed "Scrap Iron," Courtney played for five teams during his 11-year major league career, which ended in 1961. He played in one game for the New York Yankees in 1951, and was named American League Rookie of the Year in 1952 when he batted .286 for the old St. Louis Browns. He caught in 802 games with a lifetime batting average of .268.

Courtney, who resided in Couchhatta, La., is survived by his widow, Dorothy and five children.

Crampton quits U. S. Open field

MEDINAH, Ill. (UPI)—Australian Bruce Crampton, the 11th leading money winner on the pro golf tour this year and winner of the Houston Open, withdrew Monday from this week's U.S. Open, because of an injured right shoulder.

The Open begins Thursday at Medinah's No. 3 course.

MOVING AND RELAXING — Heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali's mouth is moving as he leads fans in a chant of "Ali, Ali," Monday in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, but challenger Joe Bugner of England relaxes with some Yoga exercises during his training session. The two will meet in a title fight in Malaysia June 30. (UPI)

Pele opening many doors player-wise for NASL

NEW YORK (UPI)—Pele showed Sunday that at even 70 per cent effectiveness he has much to offer North American soccer fans but, more importantly, his presence in the United States has already begun to attract other star players to the league.

Eusebio, one of Europe's top three forwards in the 1960s and a man with a harder shot in either foot than even Pele, played for the Boston Minutemen over the weekend, while Scotland's little Jimmy Johnstone is reportedly booked to join the San Jose Earthquakes.

There is some doubt about where Johnstone will eventually end up because it is understood he also has verbal agreements with San Antonio and Rochester, but the former Celtic star, who like Eusebio has a European Championship medal and is a World Cup veteran, is certain to sign with a North American Soccer League team.

European and Latin stars previously shunned the NASL because they considered it "minor league," but with the arrival of Pele, several Europeans are said to be showing interest in spending their off season in the United States.

On the evidence of Sunday's nationally televised game, in which Pele's New York Cosmos came from behind to tie the Dallas Tornado, 2-2, with "No. 10" scoring the tying goal and assisting on the other tally, the NASL has come a long way in the last five years.

As the Tornado's Kyle Rote Jr., noted, "we have shed our 'minor league' image in the eyes of the soccer-playing world." This is partially true, but soccer still is a long way from being accepted as a major league sport in the U.S.

The Cosmos already have two fine players in defender Alfredo Lamas, a veteran of the Uruguayan World Cup team, and Israel's Mordechai Shpilger, a 1970 World Cupper who has spent the last four years in France. They understand what Pele is trying to do and in another four or five games, when they can anticipate the moves, that better understanding should result in goals.
